Village faces discrimination lawsuit

Husband of firefighter claims work conditions caused 25-year-old to take her life

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

The village of Hinsdale and Lt. Tom McCarthy of the Hinsdale Fire Department are the subject of a discrimination lawsuit filed on behalf of Nicole Hladik, a firefighter who took her own life in July 2020.

The suit, filed June 28 in Illinois Northern District Court by Hladik's widower Daniel Zaborowski, alleges that Hladik was subject to discrimination and harassment based on her gender.

"At all relevant times, Hladik was the only active female firefighter working for the Hinsdale Fire Department," the suit states. "In fact, Hladik was the third female ever to become a firefighter for the Hinsdale Fire Department in its over 100-year history."

According to the suit, after Hladik was hired by the department in July 2019, she regularly met and exceeded expectations during the first six months of her probation as a member of the Gold Division under the supervision of Capt. Mike Neville and Lt. Andy Ziemer. When she was reassigned to the Black Division in January 2020, McCarthy became her supervisor.

"Immediately upon her transfer to the Black Division, Hladik experienced constant, unwelcomed emotional torment, hostility, hazing and abuse amounting to sexual discrimination and harassment by defendants," the suit states.

McCarthy is alleged to have publicly ridiculed Hladik in an attempt to make her appear inept before her male co-workers and repeatedly told her she should quit. During the final two weeks of her probation, she was subjected to a performance improvement plan with the intent to fail her from her probation, the suit claims.

In the final words she wrote before her death, Hladik said work has destroyed her, the suit claims.

"I cannot take one more single day," she wrote.

Other village personnel allegedly knew of the harassment and hostile work environment but failed to take steps to stop or mitigate it, according to the suit.

Following Hladik's death, the village hired an independent investigator to try to understand the circumstances leading up to it. The investigation included internal interviews and a review of relevant records, according to a statement released by the village.

"While Ms. Hladik's death is a terrible loss for everyone, the evidence and interviews indicate that Ms. Hladik's work environment was consistent with the high standards that all employees are held to by the village," the statement reads. "The village is prepared to unequivocally refute any allegations to the contrary and aggressively defend the lawsuit recently filed by the Hladik family."

The investigator made multiple requests to interview Hladik's family, but those requests were denied, the statement reads.

"On behalf of the village of Hinsdale, as we approach the one-year anniversary of the passing of Nicole Hladik, we again extend our condolences to her family and friends," the statement reads. "She was a member of the village's firefighter family and we miss her as well."

Zaborowski, represented by James Pullos of Clifford Law Offices, is seeking a jury trial and compensatory damages in an amount to be determined, economic damages (back pay wages, future wages and fringe benefits), attorney's fees and other relief. A spokeswoman for Clifford Law Offices said the firm has no comment on the case.

Camp helps future cheerleaders develop all the right moves

A cheerleading camp held earlier this summer in Robbins Park was sponsored by the Hinsdale Park and Rec Department. Rain sent the campers into The Community House to practice their moves, which included arm motions, tumbling and floor routines, basic stunts and jumps as well as crowd and sideline cheers. DePaul cheerleader Kathleen Doyle, along with several other college cheerleaders, taught the skills to the campers. (Jim Slonoff photos)

Special delivery — According to Sandy Williams’ book, “Images of America — Hinsdale,” Charles Kimball was a Civil War veteran who was troubled by pain from chronic war wounds. He was a patient of Dr. David Paulson, a Chicago physician associated with Michigan’s Battle Creek Sanitarium. “Kimball persuaded Paulson to open a branch of the sanitarium in Hinsdale on the former Beckwith estate, shown here. Located north of the railroad tracks near Oak Street, the 10-acre property was purchased by Kimball in 1904, who offered it to Paulson on generous terms.”

Low and slow key to smoking tasty meats

Big Green Egg, specialty woods among the tools cooks use to create moist, flavorful dishes

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

Married to a professional chef, David Schwalb wasn't about to compete with his wife's kitchen skills, so he took his cooking game outdoors.

"If it's something to be barbecued, it's my area," said Schwalb, who has been perfecting the arts of grilling and smoking for about 10 years. His primary tools are a gas grill, which he uses for grill jobs, and a Big Green Egg for smoking meats.

"Ribs are probably my favorite thing to do," Schwalb said. This specialty dish requires the use of both the grill and the smoker.

"I smoke them for two hours, wrap them in foil for two hours, then put them on the grill for another hour," he said "You really can't screw it up."

While the grill is great for quicker things, like burgers, chicken, steaks and fish, the Big Green Egg is Schwalb's tool of choice for things like pork shoulder.

"That's kind of an all-day affair," he said.

When smoking meat, the quality of the cut isn't of utmost importance, said Schwalb, who tries to buy local whenever he can. Even a tough cut will be tender after hours of slow cooking on the smoker, he said.

The Big Green Egg maintains an even temperature for a long period of time, making it ideal for foods that require slow cooking. But Schwalb said his egg also makes a

All-purpose rub

These key ingredients create the perfect meat rub, according to grill-master Dave Schwalb.

- brown sugar
- garlic powder
- onion powder
- salt
- pepper
- cayenne pepper
- smoked paprika

Mix ingredients to taste and make plenty to have on hand.

Avid griller Dave Schwalb said grilling is a great way to entertain in summer, but he doesn't limit his outdoor cooking to just one season. He uses his grill and smoker to make meals for his family and friends year round. (Jim Slonoff photo) great outdoor pizza oven. Set to a high temperature, the Big Green Egg adds flavor and a crispy crust in about 4 minutes, Schwalb said. He's even used it to kick up the flavor of a pre-made pizza.

When it comes to rubs and sauces, Schwalb likes to kick up the heat a bit with peppers, smoked paprika or cayenne powder. Sometimes, he makes his own, but he also likes to try interesting flavors from the store shelf. Experimenting is part of the fun, he said.

Now that he's perfected his rib game and become comfortable with things like chicken and steak, Schwalb said his next step is fish.

"I want to start grilling more fish. That's one of my favorite things to eat," he said.

As for those just starting out as outdoor cooks, Schwalb has three bits of advice.

First, don't be afraid to smoke meats for a long time.

Removing the meat too soon is a common mistake.

Secondly, let the meat rest. "You want to let it rest for a good 10 or 15 minutes," Schwalb said. This allows the juices to pool inside, making the meat more flavorful and keeping it moist.

Finally, don't be intimidated.

"Even if it's not perfect, people appreciate that you're cooking for them," Schwalb said.

Chunks of flavor

Urban Loggers Club began selling wood for backyard fires in spring 2020, just around the time that most Americans were spending a whole lot more time at home. It wasn't long before they branched out to also offer smoked woods for outdoor cooking.

Adam Dremak is co-owner of Urban Loggers Club, which sells its smoked wood chunks at the Hinsdale Farmers Market every Monday. Available in a variety of woods, including oak, hickory, cherry, apple, pecan and bourbon oak, Dremak said the wood chunks add flavor to just about anything that can go on a grill or in a smoker.

"They can be used in any type of fire," he said, including gas grills, charcoal grills and smokers.

Dremak said there are no steadfast rules when it comes to smoking meats. While he prefers a fruity wood for pork, there's no reason not to try hickory or oak.

"There are many different ways that people choose to smoke their meats, and there's really no right or wrong way to do it," he said. "It all comes down to preference."

Pork butt and beef brisket are two of Dremak's favorite

SUMMER PURSUITS

This is another in a series of stories on summer hobbies things to cook using Urban Loggers Club woods. The secret is to cook the meat at a low temperature for a long period of time. He suggests a guideline of one hour per pound of meat, cooked at 200 to 250 degrees.

"Always allow for more time than you think you will need," Dremak said.

When smoking meat for the first time, Dremak's advice is to start small. Purchase a 2- or 3-pound brisket or pork butt, and allow yourself the freedom to mess it up. Experimentation is part of the process, Dremak said.

"Good mistakes happen. Sometimes, it can turn out even better than you thought," he said.

West Nile Virus cases increase, caution urged

With the return of warm temperatures coupled with drier conditions, the DesPlaines Valley Mosquito Abatement District cautions residents that the production of mosquitoes involved in the transmission of West Nile Virus is on the increase.

The first WNV positive mosquito sample was found in mid-June, and district monitoring of adult mosquito populations for WNV has found additional positive samples this week. While the risk of transmission is still low at this time, amplification of West Nile Virus within the adult mosquito population is on the increase.

Residents are encouraged to use a common sense approach in avoiding exposure to adult mosquitoes and any potential mosquito-borne diseases. Window screens should be inspected and repaired, if damaged, to prevent mosquitoes from entering the home. In addition, any openings around window air conditioners, clothes dryer vents, etc., should be eliminated for the same reason. If possible, avoid outdoor activities around dusk. If not possible, wear shoes, socks, long pants and a long-sleeved shirt. Loose fitting, light colored clothing is best. Appropriate use of insect repellents per manufacturer's instructions is recommended.

Residents should look for potential mosquito breeding sources around the home and take the following simple steps.

1. Throw away all trash that can hold water, such as cans, jars, bottles, etc.
2. Clean rain gutters/downspouts to prevent water from standing in gutters or on flat roofs.
3. Change water in bird baths, wading pools, etc., once a week.
4. Maintain swimming pools properly.
5. Remove or turn over containers, buckets, wheel barrows, etc. which may accumulate water.
6. Screen rain barrels to prevent adult mosquitoes from depositing eggs on the water's surface.
7. Aerate ornamental ponds and stock with goldfish or other surface-feeding fish to control mosquito production.
8. Dispose of any used tires without rims to prevent water accumulation.

For additional information, visit the district's website at <https://www.desplainesvalleymad.com>.

Past week has one new COVID-19 case in town

One new Hinsdale resident has tested positive for COVID-19 over the past week.

The DuPage County Health Department reported one new case, and the Cook County Health Department reported no new cases.

That brings the total number of reported cases in the village to 1,828, compared to 1,827 last week.

Amita Hinsdale Hospital had three confirmed COVID-19 patients and no patients awaiting test results as of Monday, a spokesman said.

The rolling seven-day positivity rate for Region 8, which includes DuPage County, was 2.2 percent on Saturday, compared to 1.5 percent a week prior.

Illinois has administered almost 13 million doses of vaccines. An average of 19,569 doses are being administered daily, compared to about 20,794 last week.

More than 58 percent of DuPage County residents are fully vaccinated.

Power of Jesus drives lessons at VBS

Forty adult and student volunteers at HUMC help make faith fun for 120 participants

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

It's called vacation Bible school, but there's nothing restful about the fast-paced schedule kept by the 120 children attending this summer's weeklong event at Hinsdale United Methodist Church.

For 2.5 hours each day, children have been keeping busy with a variety of activities, all geared toward strengthening their relationships with Jesus Christ.

Emma Francis first attended vacation Bible school at Hinsdale United Methodist Church as an elementary school student. Now a junior at Nazareth Academy in LaGrange Park, she is spending her fifth summer volunteering as a counselor.

"I wanted to be the counselor I always loved having," Francis said of her choice to make VBS part of her summer routine. She said VBS taught her lessons about faith and about how to treat others that she remembers and uses to this day.

Fourth-grader Vincent Logan has attended vacation Bible school five times and has one more summer to go before he ages out of the program. But he's already thinking of returning as a volunteer when he reaches sixth grade.

Vincent said he loves everything about the week, beginning with the songs that begin each day. He also said he enjoys the daily craft projects and the chance to meet new friends. And while he's having fun, he said he's learning about Jesus.

"Jesus can give you power," he said, remembering the overarching lesson of the week.

Jennifer Austgen, director of children's ministries and VBS organizer said the program theme, "Rocky Railway: Jesus' Power Pulls Us Through," explores the many ways Jesus empowers peoples' lives. On Monday, children learned how Jesus' power helps them to do hard things. On Tuesday, the focus was on Jesus' power to give people hope.

Austgen, now in her eighth year running the summer program, said things are a bit different this year. For the first time, the program's 120 participants are split between a morning and afternoon session. Austgen said the goal is to provide more social distancing for the children, who continue to be masked to protect them from COVID-19. Each session consists of 60 children who are divid-

From crafts to lessons in caring for people around the world, Hinsdale United Methodist Church's vacation Bible school is all about learning to live like Jesus. Bible school for 13 years.

"I kind of put it on their level," Greene said, using playtime as a way to teach kindness and a water play table to illustrate Jesus' ability to help us in troubled times. "Jesus calms the waves," she said.

Austgen said she chose this year's theme partially due to the experiences everyone has had over the last year and a half.

"Jesus' power helps us through the ups and downs of life," she said.

Hinsdale police joined forces with more than 200 other local law enforcement agencies from June 17 through July 6 to get drunk and drugged drivers off the roads and encourage seat belt use. The effort featured high-visibility enforcement combined with a variety of outreach activities, including a media campaign.

The enforcement period was funded by federal traffic safety funds administered by the Illinois Department of Transportation as part of the statewide "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" and "Click It or Ticket" programs.

Desire to help draws Renehan to public service

Running for office wasn't always part of Julie Renehan's plan, but doing what she could to help her community was. In 2017, she determined the best way to do that was to pursue a seat on the DuPage County Board.

"I decided I was going to take my community service to the next level," said Renehan, who had volunteered in many capacities, including with the Hinsdale Junior Women's Club and as an election judge prior to placing her name on the 2018 ballot.

After a successful run for office, Renehan stepped into her role as District 3 commissioner with a goal of creating a stronger focus on how the county cares for its least fortunate residents, including seniors, veterans and those who live in lower resourced areas.

One of those areas is Willowbrook Corner, located just south of Hinsdale. Renehan said the economic challenges faced by residents of Willowbrook Corner are only made worse by a lack of public transportation in the area. The inability to easily travel to and from home means residents there can't get to jobs, doctor's appointments or affordable grocery stores.

"It's a transportation desert," said Renehan, who is hoping to relieve the neighborhood's thirst for mobility. She said the county recently received a grant to launch a study into the area's transportation needs.

Renehan said she believes helping those most in need strengthens the entire community.

"When we all do better, we all do better," she said.

As a county board member, Renehan has a say in how federal funds received by the county are spent. Recent allocations that have met with Renehan's approval include $1 million to provide internet access to low-income kids learning remotely, and $35,000 to the Hinsdale Community Services food pantry. Right now, she and the rest of the commissioners are working to allocate $179 million in federal COVID-19 recovery money.

Technically, Renehan's job as county commissioner is part time. But she said she gives it her all, often putting in long hours meeting with constituents and learning about their concerns. Rather than spend time in her Wheaton office, Renehan said she prefers to meet people where the work needs to be done, usually at their homes or places of business.

One of the face-to-face meetings recently resulted in the homeowners, township and county engineers working together to find a solution to a stormwater issue.

"Things like that are not uncommon," she said, and among the things she enjoys most about her position on the county board.

A graduate of Vanderbilt University, Renehan attended law school at Washington University in her hometown of St Louis. After a semester spent in Washington, D.C., she was offered a job on Capitol Hill, but chose instead to marry and start a family.

She and husband Dan, a Hinsdale Central graduate, raised their three children in Hinsdale.

"We've loved living here," Renehan said.

Hinsdale could host its own Summer Games

The Tokyo Olympics — which start Friday — will feature 11,000 athletes competing in 339 events across 33 sports over 17 days.

The 621 members of Team USA hope to capture their fair share of the 5,000 medals available (made out of 79,000 tons of recycled electronics). NBCUniversal will air more than 7,000 hours of Olympics coverage on TV and streaming video, starting at 6:55 a.m. Friday with a live broadcast of the opening ceremony.

After waiting for almost a year for these Summer Games, we're more than ready. We're so excited, in fact, that we came up with our own list of Olympic events we think could play out right here in Hinsdale.

- Artistic driving — in lieu of artistic swimming, pavement substitutes for water as drivers repeatedly circle the parking deck at First and Garfield looking for a spot.

- Boxing — Longtime favorite eatery Page's takes on the recently relocated Egg Harbor to retain its title as the No. 1 breakfast spot in downtown Hinsdale.

- Canoeing — Residents of northeast Hinsdale inadvertently trained for this event three weeks ago when heavy rains turned their streets into rivers.

- Football — The Red Devils' gridiron squad planned to squeeze this event between their spring and fall seasons. They were confident they'd earn a medal — until they realized Olympic football is played on a pitch.

- Golf — In this adaptation, Ruth Lake Country Club members will tee off against their rivals from Hinsdale Golf Club for the title of best-dressed duffer.

- Gymnastics — A certain Patch reporter is the favorite in this contest, in which writers perform verbal gymnastics to make mundane happenings appear controversial.

- Field hockey — The youth and inexperience, professionally speaking, of the Hinsdale Central Hockey Club is put to the test against the older and more experienced Blackhawks alums who have called Hinsdale home at one time or another as both teams struggle with playing on grass instead of ice.

- Pentathlon — The Hinsdale High School District 86 Board is a shoe-in for a gold, having developed the stamina necessary to compete through meetings that last about as long as a pentathlon.

- Sport climbing — In another modified category, Hinsdale's 1-percenters are expected to sweep the medals in social climbing.

- Swimming — Spectators, who will be allowed only at this event, will enjoy watching any competition at the new Hinsdale Central natatorium, where the overwhelming smell of chlorine and heavy humidity are things of the past.

- Tennis — District 86 and Community Consolidated Elementary District 181 engage in a spirited back-and-forth with the Illinois Department of Public Health and the Illinois State Board of Education on new COVID-19 restrictions, sure to be released at the last minute before the 2021-22 school year begins.

- Triathlon — Developer Ryan Companies has lost the first two legs of this race, but hopes its third plan for Hinsdale Senior Residences at the corner of Ogden Avenue and Adams Street will get a gold medal from the Hinsdale Village Board.

- Weightlifting — The Hinsdale High School District 86 board has tackled the weighty topics of integrated math and the "physics first" science sequence. What heavy lifting is in store in the next round of competition?

More to love about England than the Beatles

Sticky toffee pudding eluded me for most of my life.

A lover of cakes and cheese-cakes, I didn't discover this amazing dessert until I was almost 40.

Dan and I were on my dream "Jane Austen trip" to England (with some dungeon visits thrown in to keep him happy) to celebrate my milestone birthday. In addition to visiting her grave in Winchester and her museum in Bath, both of which brought me great joy, I discovered sticky toffee pudding.

I can't remember what prompted me to order it, but I did. And then I preceded to have it every night for the rest of the trip. Some nights it was an individual cake served with ice cream, others it might be a slice of cake. One night I was served an entire small loaf, cut into cute little slices.

Pudding, of course, is the universal term for dessert for Brits. Sticky toffee pudding, for the uninitiated, is a moist date cake covered in a kind of caramel sauce.

I often dreamed of enjoying more of this delicious dessert after we got back to the states but never did so (with the exception of a specialty sticky toffee pudding flavor Haagen-Dazs sold for a while).

Then, in 2013, a former co-worker shared a pic of a homemade version on Facebook.

"Send me the recipe!" I messaged her.

And she did.

My first attempt was a marginal success. The cake was delicious, but quite sunken and dense in the middle (the recipe warns it will fall). Since then I've discovered splitting the batter in half and using a bundt pan eliminates the soggy parts of the cake — and adds to the presentation.

The best part of sticky toffee pudding, of course, is the sticky toffee sauce, and this particular recipe makes an obscene amount of it. The recipe calls for 4 1/2 cups of brown sugar, 3 sticks of butter and 2 cups of heavy cream.

"Refrigerate any unused sauce," it advises, suggesting there might be a little left over. I find this hilarious. I love sauce — and use it generously — and still have enough surplus to top several other desserts.

Despite my love of sticky toffee pudding, I didn't realize until this week that there is a village called Cartmel in County Cumbria that is home to the country's most famous version of the pudding. (A "Hidden Britain" piece from BBC Travel caught a co-worker's eye after a discussion about the Haagen-Dazs flavor.)

Cumbria is also known for the Cumberland rum ricky, Borrowdale teabread and Grasmere gingerbread, among other fabulously named desserts.

Reporter Mike MacEacheran, who refers to STP as "a sweet that hums with happiness," was on a mission to uncover the dessert's origins. He cited a book by a Cumbria-based author that claims sticky toffee pudding was introduced by the Sharrow Bay Hotel on Ullswater in the early 1970s.

Not so easily convinced, MacEacheran set out on a "pudding detective hunt" across England. He discovered other claims that the dessert is — gasp — Canadian and that it was on the menu at the Gait Inn in Millington, Yorkshire, as early as 1907.

I, of course, have far less interest in discovering the true origins of sticky toffee pudding than I do in tasting different versions of it. And now, thanks to MacEacheran and the BBC, I have a short list of spots to add to the itinerary for our next trip to England.

Ainsley, a devout Beatles fan, has requested a trip to Liverpool in the next few years. Fortunately it's less than a two-hour drive to The Cartmel Sticky Toffee Pudding Co.

Swing and a miss launch love affair

It was a bright June day. Prior to that moment, I had never wielded a golf club in my 31 years of life. It was my turn to tee off, and I stepped up to the golf ball, took my first swing — and missed the ball.

Hesham Hassaballa

a bridge over water? I've done it. Hit a golf ball on a tree and have it land in front of the green? I've done that, too. Hit eight golf balls into the water from the drop zone only to shank the ninth Everyone gave me an encouraging nod to try again. I swung again and missed a second time. I could feel the tension growing, and so I hastily swung a third time. I missed yet again. I quickly swung again, and I finally hit the golf ball, which traveled about 10 feet along the ground.

"Alright," I said, clapping my hands. "Let's go!" The rest of the round was downhill from there. I had a blast (and very high golf score), and my foursome companions were very gracious.

A few weeks later, I attended a hospital golf outing. My golf score was also quite high. The hospital CEO looked at it and said nothing.

"Oh no, you don't understand," I told him. "I was going for the 'Most Honest Golfer' award!" He had a hearty laugh. Perhaps out of pity, that night I was awarded The Most Honest Golfer award and given $50 cash. Ever since those first few challenging rounds of golf, I was hooked on the game forever.

You name it, I've done it on a golf course.

Hit a golf ball under shot around the water? Yup, that was me. Yet, despite all of that tragedy, I keep coming back for more.

I just love being out on the golf course. I so enjoy the nature (I am frequently shooting my second shot from underneath a tree) and fresh air, and golfing lets me escape the stresses and strains of our world. As an ICU physician having cared for hundreds of COVID-19 patients, golfing is one of those things I do for self-care, and I absolutely love it, my poor skills notwithstanding.

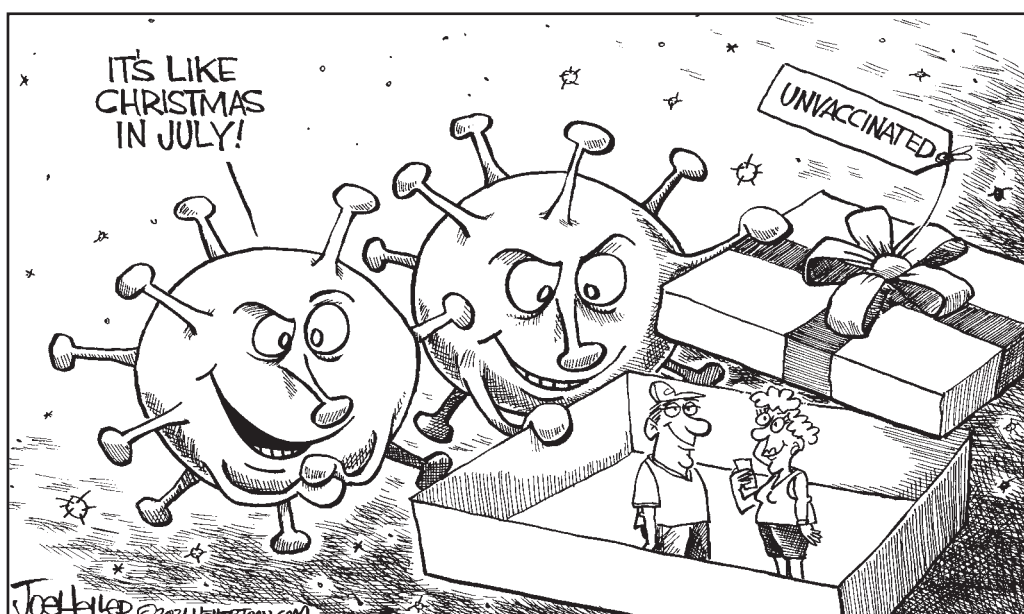

Now, my 9-year-old son has taken an interest in golfing, and it is so amazing. Of course, I've done it right by him, and he takes lessons with a local golf professional. He and I frequently go golfing together, and we have such a great time. He is already leagues better than I am, and it is a beautiful thing to see. One day, I hope to see him win multiple golf awards, and these awards will have nothing to do with honesty in scoring.

IT TAKES A VILLAGE

DAN DEETER, VILLAGE ENGINEER

Dan Deeter was working as an engineering consultant on private construction projects in 2008 when the Great Recession took a wrecking ball to the market.

"I was designing and developing subdivisions for a variety of different home builders," he said. "When the bottom dropped out, there was a whole bunch of civil engineers who were out of jobs."

Deeter decided to explore the municipal sector, applying for the village engineer position in Hinsdale. He was asked if he planned to return to private industry once conditions improved.

"I said, 'You've got a career's worth of work here,'" Deeter recounted. "I decided to stay."

Shortly after his hiring, the village launched its master infrastructure plan to repair and upgrade the streets, sewers and water mains.

A self-described "Army brat," Deeter lived all over the world as a youth. He attended West Point, earning a degree in general engineering in 1980 and served in the Army, either active duty or in reserves, for the next 26 years.

In the wake of 9-11, Deeter traveled to Afghanistan with the Army Corps of Engineers to help supervise the rebuilding of war-ravaged roads and bridges as well as schools and medical clinics.

"The (military) wanted to get restoration going as soon as possible," he said, noting how schools for girls had been shut down by the Taliban and used as barracks.

"During the civil war, those barracks got attacked and destroyed," he said. "So we were rebuilding girls and boys schools. It's was really rewarding."

He recalled taking photos of a bridge demolition work site manned by two Afghanis using only hammers and chisels.

"I look down at the camera, and then I look back up and there are now three guys standing there," Deeter said. "I look back up and there are five guys standing there."

"None of them had a picture of themselves," he explained, and he would give them each a printed copy.

Deeter also was deployed to Kuwait to develop the infrastructure needed for Operation Iraqi Freedom. Resourcefulness was vital, such as reversing the flow of crude oil pipes to fuel land-based military equipment instead of going to the port for shipment.

"There were interesting innovations that we did," said the father of three.

That visionary approach has been helpful in his current role. For example, this year's Chicago Avenue reconstruction with a new water main could have simply been a resurfacing for less money, But at a much steeper long-range cost.

"The water main underneath it is 100 years old," Deeter said, noting what would have happened if it had not been replaced. "We're just going to have to break into it again to fix the (water main) breaks."

From stormwater detention solutions to working with the Illinois Tollway on mitigating the impact of its expansion on residents, Deeter relishes having something tangible to point to at the end of the day.

"I like engineering because you get concrete results," he remarked, acknowledging the pun. "You can see the results of your work, the improvements you make that help people."

— by Ken Knutson

Dan Deeter has worked as the village engineer for Hinsdale since 2008. He said he enjoys being part of a such a professional and dedicated staff and helping develop solutions to enhance residents' quality of life. (Jim Slonoff photo)

Two hundred and forty-three homes are for

This Tudor revival by R. Harold Zook, which has had only four owners in its 93-year history, has recently been re-imagined. The newly built coach house and three-plus-car garage was designed to blend seamlessly with the original architectural style and is perfect for a guest suite or in-law/au pair arrangement.

"It has today's amenities but it has the charm of a classic Hinsdale home, and it's a Zook on top of that," Collins said. "It's been full gutted and restored. It's the best of both — old world charm and modern amenities."

"It's on almost three-fourths of an acre at First and County Line Road," she added. "Really it's a beautiful piece of property."

Dolehide has a blast on the grass

Dazzling doubles run at Wimbledon elevates Hinsdalean into world top 30

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale's Caroline Dolehide experienced a fortnight to remember at The Championships at Wimbledon earlier this month as the pro tennis player reached the tournament's semifinals in women's doubles.

She and partner Australian Storm Sanders found a winning formula, defeating their first four opponents in straight sets en route to the final four. After a hard-fought three-setter in which the pair had three match points, a spot in the finals ultimately eluded their grasp.

It was Dolehide's second near miss in playing for a Grand Slam title. She and teammate Vania King made the semifinals at the U.S. Open two years ago, falling in three sets.

With the Duke of Kent looking on and celebrities like David Beckham and Tom Cruise spotted on the grounds, Dolehide said just being at the hallowed All England Lawn and Tennis Club was special.

"There always is (a sense of awe) because of how prestigious the event it," the 22-year-old Dolehide said by phone last week. "It's just such an honor to play there."

Dolehide and Sanders had only just teamed up a few weeks earlier at the Viking Open Nottingham, making it all the way to the finals before losing a heartbreaker 10-8 in the third set. Their chemistry was evident.

"We'd been talking about playing with each other the last few months," Dolehide remarked. "I love the person she is and her energy."

She said she gravitates toward partners who mesh well with her big serving and solid volleying brand of tennis, as well as her personality.

"I specifically look for partners who complement my game style and who are really good people," Dolehide said.

That was true in April in linking up with friend Asia Muhammed for a Women's Tennis Association tournament in Monterrey, Caroline Dolehide and partner Storm Sanders celebrate winning their women's doubles quarterfinal at Wimbledon on July 7. It was second Grand Slam semifinal appearance in doubles for Dolehide, who also reached the final four at the 2019 U.S. Open. Mexico. They came home with the first-place trophy.

"I absolutely love playing with her. She's such a great person," she said of Muhammed. "That was the first WTA title I won. To win that title was so special for me."

Unfortunately there were no fans there to witness it due to COVID-19 restrictions. Nor were any in attendance for her triumph in Boca Raton, Fla., in February with frequent cohort Usue Arconada.

"I really love playing with different people," Dolehide said.

She tried to keep fit physically and mentally during the pandemic lockdown, treating it like an extended preseason. Thankfully, she was among the players invited to emerge from quarantine competitively last summer with a special tournament at The Greenbriar in West Virginia followed by World Team Tennis' competition at the same place, all in a bubble.

"It was so much fun, just being at the same place for like three or four weeks with the same people," said Dolehide, who played for the Philadelphia Freedoms with teammates including Australian Open singles champion Sofia Kenin. "We were coaching each other and all helping each other out. When we had a off day, we did some team activities like riding ATVs and skeet shooting."

Dolehide emphasized that even after the doubles exploits that have pushed her world ranking up to 29, singles remains her primary pursuit. She attempted to qualify for Wimbledon's singles draw but lost a hard-fought match to a fellow American. She found positives, however, in the defeat.

"I just really wanted to work on the things that I'd been working on with my coach every single day," she related. "For my coach and me, it was a very good match, and we reflected on how I was able to put myself in that winning position. I'm playing some really good tennis."

Next month she heads to Concord, Mass., the scene of celebration in 2019 when she won that tournament's inaugural event. Being defending champion means she's featured prominently on the 2021 marketing materials.

Then she'll return to her home turf for the WTA Chicago 125 tournament Aug. 16-22 as she prepares for the U.S. Open in New York that begins Aug 30.

"Since my singles career is my priority, I'm going to focus on getting my singles ranking up," Dolehide said, noting that will help her avoid qualifying rounds that can get in the way of playing in doubles draws.

For her, one can profit the other.

"I think both (singles and doubles) are amazing, and both complement each other really well," she said. "My training has shown up in the results of the doubles, and I'm looking forward to it showing in my singles results, too."

Few have racked up a list of achievements like Dolehide before the age of 23. She believes the best lies ahead.

"My first thought is I always knew I would take this route in my career, but I didn't know how successful I really would be," she said of choosing the pro athlete path. "I'm really happy how things are going right now, and I'm really excited for the future."
