Community journalism the way it was meant to be

If a picture is worth 1,000 words — then several hundred million were “spoken” at the Hinsdale Central prom Red Carpet event Saturday evening. Before the kids were whisked away in more than a dozen large black limousine buses, they spent an hour with their friends and families posing for prom photos. Next week we’ll share the images of those who were posing in front all the cameras — the prom goes themselves. (Jim Slonoff photos)

Walk for Wellness participants step up to challenge

More than 3,000 runners attended the Walk for Wellness Sunday, with the fundraising total hitting $600,000 Monday, more than $25,000 than the original goal. Before the race, participants wrote messages to loved ones who had been affected by cancer. This was the final walk for President and CEO Jeannie Cella, who has worked at Wellness House since she joined the staff as an intern in 1990. Team Brooks Strong, whose younger members were the first off, came in third in fundraising. (Jim Slonoff photos)

Change would require dogs to be leashed

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale police have asked trustees to consider requiring dogs on a public way to be on a leash at all times.

The amended ordinance also would allow the village to impound dogs involved in serious attacks on people to be confined at the Hinsdale Humane Society Pet Rescue and Shelter while the DuPage County Animal Services determines whether they are dangerous or vicious.

The item was on the Hinsdale Village Board agenda Tuesday night for discussion only. A woman was attacked last year by two large dogs — that were not on a leash — after she picked up her small dog and held it over her head to protect it, Village President Tom Cauley said.

“It was a really, really serious injury,” he said. “I really think this woman who was attacked by this dog was traumatized, as were her neighbors. I think we should have ordinances in place to prevent this from happening.”

The dogs were taken to the animal shelter, but the village’s existing ordinance allowed the owner to pick them up immediately, Cauley said.

The revised ordinance also would specify that restraint means having a dog on a leash. Having a dog under “voice command” would not be enough.

Brain Freel, a neighbor of the woman Cauley referenced, supported the change. He said his dog had been attacked by one of the dogs that injured the woman, and he believes all dogs should be on a leash.

“Whenever I walk my dog, I get nervous when I see a dog not on a leash,” he said.

Trustee Neale Byrnes said he doesn’t think requiring a leash would affect that many residents.

“As a twice-a-day dog walker, I would say like 98 percent of the dogs who are being walked are on leashes,” he said.

The changes would not affect the time dogs are allowed to be off leash at Katherine Legge Memorial Park, Police Chief Brian King noted.

The ordinance will be on the agenda for a first read at the next village board meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 21.

Cauley said he hopes residents will share their opinions on the proposed changes.

Trustees could vote on the matter at their Tuesday, June 11 meeting,

Schmich shares her thoughts on aging

Celebrated columnist touches on impact of her mother's journey during visit last week

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

"It's not about staying young. It's about acknowledging what is truly happening to you."

That was among the insights Pulitzer Prize-winning Chicago Tribune columnist Mary Schmich shared with about 250 audience members during a talk at The Community House May 1, co-sponsored by King-Bruwaert House. Among the topics she covered was what it means to age and how to redefine that latter stage of life, drawing on her own experience watching and walking with her mother in her final years.

Schmich chronicled that period in a series of columns, which had widespread resonance among readers.

"It wasn't just me writing about my mother. It was me writing about an experience that many of us have shared or will share," Schmich told listeners.

The columns were compiled in a book entitled, "Even the Terrible Things Seem Beautiful to Me Now." Those words were spoken by her mother, who Schmich noted had endured many hardships, about a year before her death.

"I thought, 'I'm going to remember that!'" she quipped, eliciting chuckles.

Schmich, 65, was asked by moderator Annie Krug, execu-

Annie Krug, executive director of The Community House, interviews the Chicago Tribune's Mary Schmich May 1 during a luncheon program with the Pulitzer Prize winning columnist. Talking about ageism, Schmich told audience to guard their actions and words concerning older members of society. "Ask yourself, 'How am I behaving in ways that are actually harmful to me and to other people?'" she said. (photo by Maggie Weiterman-Skinner courtesy of The Community House)

tive director of The Community House, about societal treatment of aging,

"I am aware in a way that I wasn't, even 10 years ago, of all the diminishing ways that we talk, write and think about aging," she replied, expressing her objection to using "elderly" to describe a person. "Give an age! Don't say, 'An elderly man was killed by a car ...' How old was he?"

She cited the quote by author and activist Ashton Applewhite that "ageism is the last socially sanctioned prejudice." In a follow-up email, Schmich amplified her remarks.

"We need to examine our internalized bias against aging — against our own aging and the aging of others. Are we always trying to 'correct' or hide our age or our aging process?" Schmich posed. "Look at the way we talk. Do we talk dismissively of 'old people,' even if we'd resent being talked about that way?"

Trying to measure one's value by the standards of bygone youth is "madness," she opined.

"That's not to say we shouldn't try to stay healthy and fit — of course we should — but, in general, a 65-year-old body ain't gonna be a 25-year-old body. Get used to it," Schmich stated. "And get used to the fact that getting old, approaching death, inevitably comes with worry and fear," she said.

Although she doesn't journal often, Schmich believes that her columns were cathartic for her by processing her mother's "waning through storytelling." Those caring for or mourning a parent should seek a healthy outlet for their emotions, she counseled, as should those struggling with aging's effects.

■ REDEFINING AGING

"I think finding some form of creative expression can be very helpful in processing the loss of a parent, or your own aging, whether it's writing, drawing, playing an instrument. I did all of those a lot while my mother was dying and after her death. They were a great release and a form of contemplation. Moving is good too. Walk. Do yoga. Breathe. Go be with the trees. Those are the best physical and mental antidotes to anxiety over aging I know," she said.

Aging is a journey no one will avoid, and the best way to approach it is with acceptance and appreciation for each step's joys and lessons.

"I think the key is to find the balance between acknowledging what is — age happens, death comes — and finding the ways — creative expression, caring relationships, moving as much as your body allows — that let our hearts stay open to the world and to ourselves," Schmich submitted. "Age isn't just an attitude. But an open attitude helps."

New aging website connects users, resources

By Pamela Lannom

plannom@thehinsdalean.com

"To be alive is to be aging."

That's one of the messages of a new website devoted to helping connect those who are aging and their loved ones with information and resources.

The website, redefiningaging.org, was established through the leadership of Community Memorial Foundation in partnership with The Hinsdalean and members of the Healthy Aging Task Force. It was announced last week at two events: a May 1 lunch at The Community House featuring Mary Schmich (see story above) and Aging Care Connections' luncheon at La Grange Country Club the same day to kick off Aging Well Month.

"I think we had two successful events launching this initiative," said

Annie Krug, executive director of The Community House, who was instrumental in creating the site.

She is most impressed by the quantity of information it contains.

"We knew sitting around that table that there is a lot going on in our community, and even the service providers who are pretty dialed in to each other don't understand the breadth and scope of it," she said.

The site's approach treats aging as a natural part of being alive, rather than a topic to be avoided.

"There was an element of needing to be candid and authentic and real about this, and to quit tip-toeing around some stuff," said Krug, who wrote the copy.

Greg DiDomenico, president and chief executive officer of Community Memorial Foundation, said providing a grant for the site's development fit well with the foundation's mission.

"We're always looking for ways to be able to increase awareness of local resources and assets, and by doing that in partnership with the Healthy Aging Task Force — and of course The Hinsdalean and The Community House — it certainly helps us deepen the impact of our investment," he said.

The site organizes information based on the user. An individual seeking information for him or herself can click on "My Journey." Those assisting a loved one can access resources by clicking on "A Partner on the Journey." Links provide information about housing services, health care and wellness, legal services, mental health and counseling services, and more. The site also will include all of the stories published as part of The Hinsdalean's Redefining Aging series.

■ REDEFINING AGING

This is another story in an ongoing series that examines issues associated with aging.

"There's a lot of great information about local resources and tools and assets in our community," DiDomenico said. "It's a great addition."

Content for the site's pilot year of will be provided by members of the Healthy Aging Task Force, which are listed on the site. Use of the site will be monitored for 12 months — the period covered by the grant — before a decision is made about its future.

"We're really proud of it," Krug said. "We are really, really pleased with what we believe is an effective tool that showcases our extraordinary resources in the community."

On the draft agenda: summer meeting schedule, KLM parking lot repaving update, commissioner park walk-throughs, July 4 volunteers/parade participation

MEETING ROUNDUP

Hinsdale Village Board

Among other business Tuesday, trustees:

- listened to Luke Stifflear and Laurel Haarlow take the oath of office to serve a four-year term on the board. Haarlow was elected to her first term and Stifflear was re-elected to his second term on April 2. Scott Banke, who also was elected April 2 and was not able to attend, will be sworn in Tuesday, May 21. Trustees Michael Ripani and Chris Elder did not run for re-election.

Ripani said he enjoyed his time on the board and found his experience living in the village has only gotten better since he moved here in 2003.

"This has been a really wonderful town to live in," he said. "The moral of the story is volunteer, because it will enrich your time in this community."

- pulled from the agenda an item awarding bid group 1 for excavation and stormwater management for the parking deck project and rejected all competitive bids for plumbing for the parking deck project, as they were over budget. The plumbing system will be redesigned and rebid.

- unanimously approved a new agreement and granted a recreation license to the Hinsdale Platform Tennis Association, which will take over the paddle tennis program, with annual financial support from the village.

"I think this is a great way to organize affairs — both yours and ours," Village President Tom Cauley said to HPTA reps.

- approved a policy and guidelines for requests to name newly acquired parkland, park amenities and buildings. The policy prohibits naming individual playing fields or surfaces in a village park.

- discussed awarding a bid to HR Green in an amount not to exceed $133,400 for engineering services for the East Chicago Avenue Drainage Corridor Project. Engineering and construction costs are included in the $2.1 million the Illinois Tollway Authority will provide, according to an agreement signed May 7, to reduce flooding in the vicinity of Flagg Creek. Work is set to begin April 1, 2020, and be concluded by Oct. 1, 2020. The item will be on the agenda for a second read and vote at the May 21 meeting.

- reviewed a bid from Burke LLC for the North Madison Street Flood Project (East) in an amount not to exceed $520,760 and confirmed acceptance of bids receive from Kensington Hinsdale LLC in an amount not to exceed $771,600. Kensington Hinsdale is subdividing the site and as a condition of approval, granted the village a public utility and drainage easement to help remedy persistent flooding problems on Madison. The developer has agreed to construct certain portions of the drainage improvement project, with reimbursement from the village. The items will be on the agenda for a second read and vote at the May 21 meeting.

- discussed a request for a fourth major adjustment to the planned development at 55th Street and County Line Road known as Hinsdale Meadows. The adjustment would allow for an additional 2,500-square-foot ranch plan, an optional dormer on the existing Hampton ranch plan and a lap siding option and three new color options. The request was the subject of a public hearing at the plan commission, which recommended it unanimously. The item will be on the agenda for a second read and vote at the May 21 meeting.

Plaques celebrate centennial structures

Hinsdale Historical Society resurrects program to honor homes that hit century mark

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

Proudly displayed on front porches and doorways of homes and buildings scattered throughout the village, small bronze plaques celebrate the fact that the structure behind it has stood for 100 years or more.

Back in the mid-1980s, the Hinsdale Historical Society began a program to recognize its oldest homes and buildings. About 100 homes that had passed the century milestone were marked with plaques celebrating not only the rich history of the home itself, but of the village.

As the historical society recognizes May as Preservation Month, Executive Director Lynne Smaczny has announced an effort to resurrect the program and to seek out homes and other buildings worthy of the honor.

Smaczny said the original program never formally ended, but just faded away. She hopes to renew interest in the program and get plaques on as many worthy homes and buildings as possible, now and in the years to come.

Preparations for the revitalized plaque program began with researchers from the historical society, who have determined that 10 percent or more of the buildings in Hinsdale may be eligible for the honor.

"Right now we've identified 350 to 400 houses that meet that mark," Smaczny said.

Homeowners wishing to

Executive Director Lynne Smaczny of the Hinsdale Historical Society shows off one of the plaques residents can purchase to celebrate the history of Hinsdale homes. Smaczny is bringing back a program the society started in the mid-1980s to recognize homes and other buildings that were at least 100 years old, such as the Hinsdale History Museum, built in 1874. (Jim Slonoff photo) participate in the plaque program must first provide proof of their home's age, such as a newspaper article about construction of the house or details from a title or tax search. For homes on the historical society's list, that work is already done. Others can do the research themselves, or hire the historical society to do so for $40.

Once the building's age has been proven, homeowners are eligible to purchase a customized plaque bearing the home's construction date and the words "Hinsdale Historical Society." Plaques are oval shaped and measure approximately 5 inches high and 6.5 inches wide.

Plaques cost $300 for members of the historical society and $350 for nonmembers, which includes a membership.

Anyone who has owned a house can appreciate the care required to keep it in good condition for a century or more. Smaczny said those efforts, and the heritage of the village, deserve to be celebrated.

"It's about community pride," she said.

Hinsdale experienced a post-war housing boom in the 1920s, which means many more houses will reach the century mark in the next few years. As that happens, homeowners will be eligible to celebrate the accomplishment with a plaque.

Of the 100 or so houses that received plaques between 1986 and the early 2000s, only about 65 still have their plaques in place. Some of the homes were torn down. Others may have had their plaques damaged or simply never displayed them, Smaczny said. Those homeowners also can apply to receive a new plaque.

Smaczny said a mailing will go out soon to about 350 home and building owners whose properties have been identified as meeting the criteria for the plaque program. She hopes homeowners will see the value in celebrating the rich history of their house and village by participating.

Bond set at $1 million for BR man accused of drug-induced homicide DuPage County State's Attorney Robert Berlin, DuPage Metropolitan Enforcement Group Director Andrew Anselm and Hinsdale Police Chief Brian King announced May 2 that bond has been set for a Burr Ridge man charged with supplying heroin to an acquaintance resulting in a fatal overdose.

Wasim Rashan, 27, of 809 Lakeview Lane, appeared at a bond hearing where Judge George Bakalis kept bond at $1 million with 10 percent to apply in accordance with an arrest warrant issued May 1. Rashan is charged with one count of drug-induced homicide, a Class X felony, and unlawful delivery of a controlled substance, a Class 2 Felony in the death of 23-year-old Lauren Tandy of Hinsdale.

Hinsdale police officers responded to a call of an unresponsive person at her home Jan. 14. Upon their arrival, they found Tandy deceased, the apparent victim of a drug overdose. Baggies were recovered from her bedroom containing a substance later determined to be heroin/fentanyl.

An investigation conducted by DuMEG and Hinsdale police led to Rashan. The following day, a search warrant was executed at Rashan's home, during which authorities allegedly found baggies that matched those found at the victim's home, a scale with drug residue and a list of names and phone numbers that included Tandy's name and number. It is alleged that on the day of her death, Tandy met with Rashan, who supplied her with a bag of heroin that she ingested and consequently died from a drug overdose.

Eighty-three percent of the 98 opioid overdose deaths last year in DuPage County were from illegal narcotics, Berlin said.

"To put an end to this senseless loss of life, we must do everything within our power to get the drugs off our streets and the dealers behind bars," he said.

"Our hearts go out to the family of the victim," King said. "Although nothing we do will bring her back or lessen the pain of her loss, the charges brought by the DuPage County State's Attorney Robert Berlin's office in this case will hopefully offer a measure of justice for the family and act as a deterrent to others seeking to distribute drugs in the community."

Rashan is scheduled for an arraignment June 10 in front of Bakalis.

Teaching is a labor of love for Madison instructor

A business degree was Lorene Himpelmann's goal when she went off to college. But during her studies, she reframed the vision for her education — around education.

"I took an introductory education course, and that course provided me the opportunity to go into a school and do some observation," said Himpelmann, a differentiation specialist at Hinsdale's Madison School. "I was like, 'This is where I want to be, with the kids, working with them and watching them get excited about learning.'"

All those pretend lessons she conducted as a little girl in her basement became a precursor to reality, and the Madison community is presumably grateful for that. Himpelmann is now in her third decade there equipping young learners and among those society is honoring this week during Teacher Appreciation Week.

She said having such engaged students and parents, along with supportive colleagues, validates her career choice every day.

"My reward is the kids and the excitement that they see when the understand something that they didn't understand before," Himpelmann said.

She spent the first 18 years of her tenure as a fifth-grade teacher before becoming a differentiation specialist several years ago. Himpelmann enjoyed having her own group of kids to nurture throughout the school year, fostering a family-like dynamic. In her current role, however, she relishes being able to come alongside students throughout their time at the school.

"My career has kind of evolved from being in the classroom to supporting other teachers and students in their classrooms," Himpelmann said. "You see students when they come into Madison as kindergartners, and you see them grow and develop and change. It's a special experience to be part of that."

She is thankful to have gotten her bearings as a young instructor under the wing of an encouraging partner teacher, who helped her work through the anxieties of trying to lead two dozen 10- and 11-year-olds for the first time.

"You have these kids that you're responsible for all day, and you want to make sure that you're providing the best experience for them so that they love learning and want to continue learning for the rest of their lives," Himpelmann said.

Now she works with kindergartners to fifth-graders, often in the same day, and needs to coordinate space, scheduling and resource deployment.

"In this role, I think I've grown in my ability to be flexible, be creative, be collaborative with others," Himpelmann said.

Being able to pass along her veteran insight as a mentor to new teachers is gratifying. "It's really nice to see that your experience can benefit someone else who is just starting out," she said.

And there's nothing like getting morning hi-fives, rather than sighs, from arriving students. That positive energy and love of learning must flow from teachers, Himpelmann stressed.

"You have to be passionate about what you're doing," she said. "The kids feel your excitement. They feel that you enjoy being with them."

May invites us to explore history in new ways

For most of us, the prospective rewards of what lies ahead captures the lions share of our imagination and energy. But that doesn't mean heritage has to get the heave ho.

As the National Park Service states, "Historic preservation is a conversation with our past about our future. It provides us with opportunities to ask, 'What is important in our history?' and 'What parts of our past can we preserve for the future?'"

Hinsdale, as residents and visitors can undoubtedly agree, boasts a winsome duality of heritage and contemporary in its array of housing spanning three centuries, in its downtown business district — listed on the National Register of Historic Places — juxtaposed with modern structures like the Amita Cancer Center, in its brick streets and newly reconstructed roadways.

May's designation as Preservation Month always seems to have special resonance in this village, both because of what has been preserved and what has been lost. Established in 1973 by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the event is co-sponsored by local preservation groups, state historical societies, business and civic organizations across the country.

The annual Hinsdale Cooks! Kitchen Walk (see pages 17 & 19 for details) offers people an opportunity to step into lovely village homes, both vintage and freshly constructed, to benefit the Hinsdale Historical Society's efforts to promote and preserve local history for community pride as well as the economic interests that such charming environs serve.

Read the Page 7 story on the historical society's revived plaque program to identify and designate village houses that date back to an earlier era in Hinsdale. Next week, we'll kick off a three-part installment of our Hinsdale Legacies series profiling such homes — veritable windows into the past — to understand what life was like for our predecessors in the community.

The National Park Service is a strong proponent of preservation efforts for local posterity and to protect larger story of America's development and growth.

"Through historic preservation, we look at history in different ways, ask different questions of the past and learn new things about our history and ourselves. Historic preservation is an important way for us to transmit our understanding of the past to future generations," the organization asserts at nps.gov. "Our nation's history has many facets, and historic preservation helps tell these stories."

The Hinsdalean has chronicled various aspects of the village's history over the years — the people, places and ideas that were instrumental in its evolution.

Just when we think it's all been covered, additional compelling stories surface.

Try scratching below the surface of your hometown this month, maybe with a trip to the Hinsdale History Museum, by attending the Take a Look at Zook talk May 16 at Hinsdale Public Library or through a walking tour using the HistoricalTourist: Hinsdale app. You may be surprised at what you discover.

Fifty-somethings return to the scene of the crime

Thirty-one years ago on a Thursday afternoon in late March, I finished my English senior seminar essay (with about 30 seconds to spare before the 4 p.m. deadline), walked back to my sorority house and was greeted with four words.

"Get in the car."

Seven of us were driving to Florida for spring break. My suitcase was already in the trunk, and I barely had time for a bathroom stop before we left. Some 18 hours of driving later, we reached our destination: Bonita Springs.

There we shared a condo with two double beds, a pull-out couch and a single bathroom. The price was right — only $100 apiece for the week — but you did have to sleep on the floor one night. Our condo was across the street from the beach, the sun was always shining and we took a day cruise to the Bahamas, so we had few complaints.

Last week, four of the original seven of us (along with two other sorority sisters who didn't go on spring break) were reunited in Florida, where one has made her home. I couldn't help thinking of the many contrasts between this trip and the one we took three decades ago. In what ways did they differ? So glad you asked. Here's my Top 10 list.

10. Transportation

With a quick 2 1/2-hour flight to Tampa, our trip was significantly shorter and more enjoyable than when we crammed seven people in two cars for almost two days. Twice.

9. Sleeping arrangements

We were in a condo again, but this one was in an exclusive property on the beach with four bedrooms and two baths, thanks to the generosity of a husband's friend. No nights on the floor — and enough beds that we each had one to ourselves.

8. Bedtimes

Speaking of beds, we spent a lot more time in them this trip. Then: Never in bed before midnight.

Pamela Lannom

Now: Who stays up to midnight?!

7. Sun worshipping

Worries of skin damage and wrinkles prompted us to spend significantly less time on the beach this year — and use significantly more sunscreen.

6. Cell phones

We didn't have smartphones when we were in college. We couldn't share photos or text each other from the store to see if we needed to pick up more La Croix.

We also didn't experience weird moments of silence when no one was talking because everyone was scrolling through their Facebook feed.

5. La Croix

We did not buy any La Croix in 1988. Even if it had existed then, we wouldn't have been interested. We bought two beverages: Old Milwaukee Light (for the calorie-conscious) and Old Milwaukee (for those who couldn't stomach the light version). We were on a budget. This time around we could afford a nice bottle of wine or vodka.

4. Other consumables

Cold-pressed green juice, vegan cream cheese, quinoa chips and other items we would have avoided like the plague on our 1988 trip were everywhere.

3. Eating out

Instead of the one mediocre restaurant meal we had on our college trip, we ate out every night, enjoying some truly delicious food.

2. Topics of conversation

I don't remember which topics we discussed in 1988, but I do know that health issues, kids' behavior, aging parents or how close or far away (me) we are from (gasp) retiring were not among them.

1. Appreciation

We knew we were lucky to be on spring break together in college. We felt even luckier to be back, together, after 30 years of friendship.

Connection key to loving self, others

"What are you going to write for you last article?" asked the three people besides my wife and my editor who read my articles.

"I don't know," I said, "but I want it to be worthwhile."

Here it is. You may not agree, but that's OK.

Bill Lewis

they're suffering. Instead of fixating on things that annoy us, distinguish us from or hurt us about the other person, if we try to see past those issues and attempt to connect, we'll find we've a lot in common. We'll see ourselves in them, and we'll appreciate how

If you imagine a line between you and every person in the world, that would explain where I've been coming from all along. I don't mean a genealogical line; I mean a connection that joins who you are to everyone else.

That person you love, that person you tolerate and that person you can't stand — they're all connected to you. So are those with whom you have nothing in common. I don't always like that connection, because that means I'm connected to people who dislike me or who are different as much as to people who love me.

Because we're connected, you can only love yourself as much as the person you like the least, because they're each a part of you. As a result, how you treat the "lowest" person in your life (regardless of your reasons for doing so) is how you, at least subconsciously, feel about yourself.

However, being connected doesn't make our differences, some of which are petty, and some of which are very serious, easy to accept. There's no magic point of view, religion or "Kumbaya" song that'll bring us together, except, perhaps, mercy.

Mercy because, from where we stand, we don't always know what the other person has been through or how our own history, shortcomings and problems have been misinterpreted by others, causing them not to like — and/or be hurt by — us.

Just as we desire to belong and be forgiven and accepted, we'll realize how even the most polar-opposite person from us desires and deserves that too. The desire to be understood and accepted for who we really are is universal.

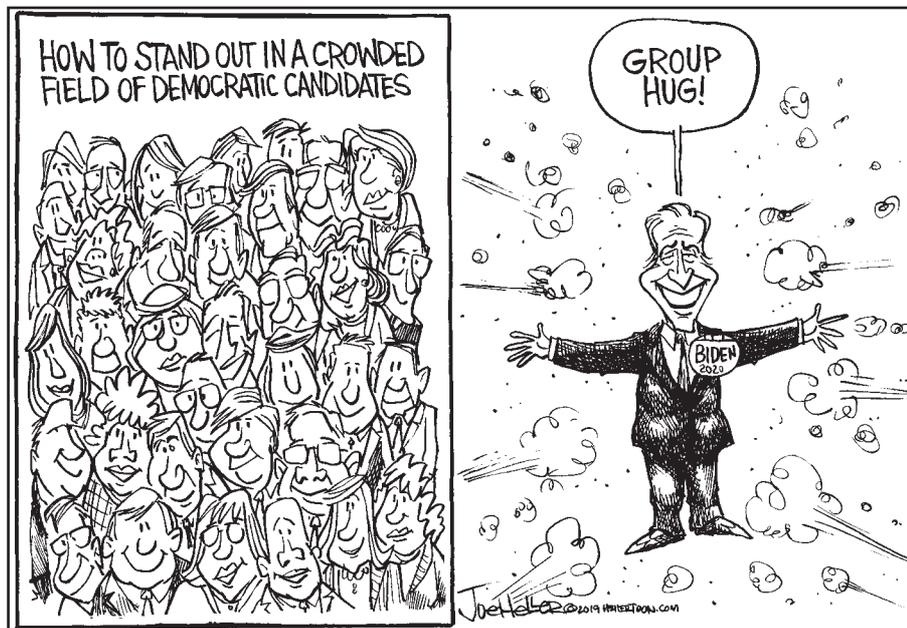

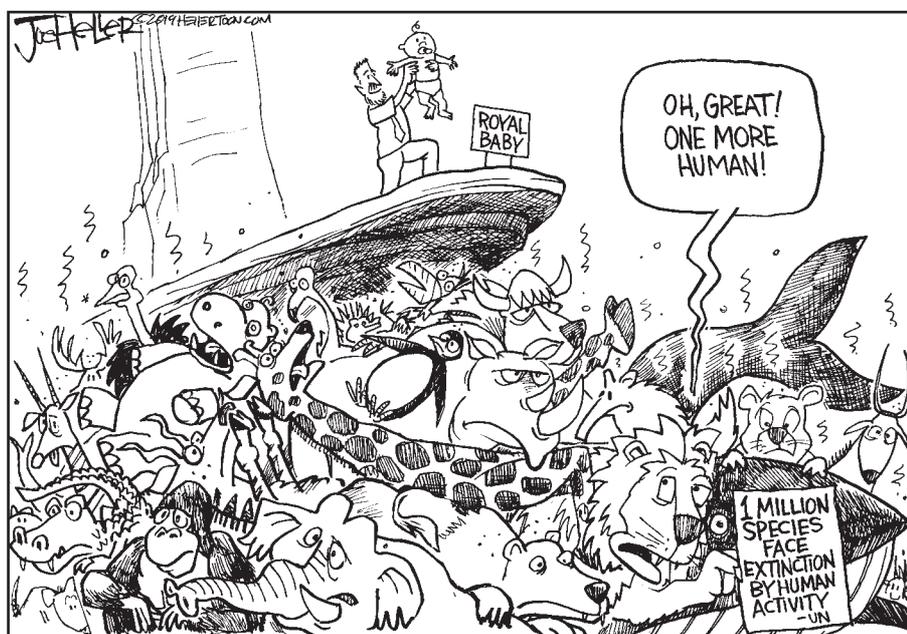

Sometimes it's easy to forget this, and I view others as their beliefs, actions or words, often ignoring who they are. Maybe you do this too. When we do, we hurt ourselves as much, if not more, than the other person. However, when we accept others, and don't define them by their brokenness, we are being the truest version of ourselves.

Doing so is difficult, vulnerable and often unpleasant, but I promise when you take that chance to reach out to the "weirdo," stranger or difficult personality, you'll see yourself in them. You'll see someone who's trying to work through life and who doesn't always know what to do or how to do it "right."

So, sow love and show mercy, and be whom you are meant to be. Peace.

Ramona Anita Weigus

Ramona Anita Weigus, nee Caracheo, 50, passed away April 30, 2019 in Marietta, Ga.

Ramona was born in 1968 in Elgin. She graduated Elgin High School in 1986 and earned her bachelor's degree in education from the University of Illinois in 1990. While at U of I, she met Brian and they married on July 13, 1996. She was employed with school district U-46 as a multi-age teacher for 12 years before "retiring" to focus on starting a family. Of course, Ramona could not stay away from the classroom, and for the past eight years she has shared her passion for reading with the students at St. Isaac Jogues School.

Her family and faith were her foundation. Whether organizing family reunions, coordinating carpools, being team mom, volunteering throughout the school and church, staying late to help with cheerleading or listening to someone in need, Ramona was an example to all. Each one of her students and the women she supported through her Elizabeth ministry held a special place in her heart. Her quiet strength, loving heart, deep faith and generous spirit brightened the lives of all who knew

ASK AN EXPERT

KATHRYN WILLIAMS, MOTHER OF FOUR

How have you approached being a mom?

Compared to her original plan, Kathryn Williams chose the easy path when it comes to parenting.

Long before becoming a mother, Williams talked of one day living in a camper with her future husband and their 10 offspring. Instead, the mother of four is raising her children in the comfort of their Hinsdale home, with the help of husband, Mike.

Regardless of where life might have taken Williams, being a mother was always part of her plan. And with a brood of four, now all teenagers, she has far surpassed the national average of 2.6 children per couple. But to Kathryn, who grew up with three siblings, and Mike, the youngest of five boys, they're just a regular-sized family — but one that doesn't fit into the typical four-door sedan, is too big to squeeze into a single hotel room and is accustomed to pulling up an extra chair at a restaurant table.

The world might not be built for families of more than four or five, but Williams said it's never been a problem.

"We just make ourselves fit," she said.

Williams said one of the best parts of being a parent is watching her children turn into the people they were meant to be.

Oldest son John is 19 and just finishing his first year at Indiana University. He's a sports fanatic and a former member of the Hinsdale Central High School golf team.

Thomas, 18, is a senior at Central, where he's on the student council and plays soccer. Williams describes her second son as quiet, funny and a great writer.

As the only girl in the family, Anne, 15, endures quite a bit of teasing from her three brothers, Williams said. A sophomore at Central, Anne hung up her soccer cleats a few years ago in favor of cheerleading and dance.

Finally, there's Brian. A 14-year-old eighth-grader, the youngest Williams is involved in Boy Scouts and loves camping and soccer.

"They're all different," Williams said, and that means each needs to be treated differently in different situations. She said she's careful to give each child what they need when they need it.

"Parenting isn't even, but it's fair," she said.

Parenting also isn't a solo job. Along with husband Mike, Williams said she receives immense support from her parents, her sister, her neighbors and friends. If she needs to be at one of Anna's dance competitions, there's always a parent willing to drive Brian to his soccer game or Scouting event.

Looking back at her earlier years as a parent, Williams said she misses the days when schedules were less hectic, life was a bit simpler and problems were a lot smaller. But there's something to love about every stage of parenting, including the joy she has now, watching her children become the responsible, hard-working, loving people she always hoped they would be.

Williams' advice to young women planning to raise a family is to relax and enjoy the ride. Once insistent on dressing her children impeccably and keeping an immaculate house, she has learned to settle for less than perfect, because what comes out of a situation is often better than what you had planned.

"Imperfect is better than perfection," she said.

Kitchen tour du jour

Local residents open their homes for annual historical society fundraiser

By Ken Knutson
kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale Cooks! Kitchen Walk will kick off its 14th consecutive Mother's Day weekend tomorrow, May 10, this year featuring seven homes (see below). Each home features a first floor tour of a fabulous kitchen as well as a special tasting or event.

"Kitchens vary from new construction to historic and preserved works; all showcasing the past, present and future of Hinsdale's unique architecture," event co-chair Kirsten Douglass said.

The walk is organized by Hinsdale Historical Society Women's Board to benefit the Hinsdale Historical Society, which uses the proceeds to preserve its three historic properties: Immanuel Hall, R. Harold Zook Home & Studio and the Hinsdale History Museum. The event runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and tickets are $50 in advance, $60 on the day of the event. Visit kitchen-walk.com and see Alexis Braden's column on Page 19 for more information.

"We are looking forward to a wonderful event in which the community comes together to support Hinsdale's history," Douglass said.

Zook Revival
46 S. County Line Road

Built in 1928, this historic Tudor Revival home by famed local architect R. Harold Zook has been recently updated with great care to balance Zook's legacy with 21st-century livability. The shape of the slate roof, a small spider web window at the front door, original beamed ceilings, and the eight-foot stone living room fireplace are just a few of the elements maintained during the home's rehabilitation. The airy, bright, modern kitchen pays homage to its legacy with vintage-style appliances and light fixtures.

Touch of Sweden
206 S. Bodin St.

A unique combination of transitional architecture and modern Scandinavian finishes, this 2018 home has an open floor plan allowing rooms to flow easily. The kitchen features a steam oven, a custom hood and sliding glass windows over the sink that open to allow summer breezes. The wood ceiling in the entry and the three-season room are unique finishes that provide interest and warmth to the open floor plan.

Historic Restoration
220 N. Lincoln St.

This graceful Colonial Revival home is known as the "Emanuel Karlson House." The Swedish immigrant opened Karlson's Shoes in 1895, and the store remained a Hinsdale staple until 1967. Built in 1923, the home features much of its original floor plan with an updated kitchen and bathrooms to accommodate a large, contemporary family. The kitchen has been expanded to incorporate large refrigeration and maximum storage, a unique feature for most homes.

Bright and Unexpected
418 S. Park Ave.

This Belgian Farmhouse was constructed in 2018 and has floors throughout with an invisible finish, which highlights the natural color and knots of the wood planks. Monochromatic furnishings with pops of color contribute to the light and airy feeling throughout the home. A love of windows and unique custom nooks, furniture and design elements make this home a must-see.

Celebrity Influence
422 E. Sixth St.

This stately home is a remarkable collection of materials and chic sophisticated appointments. Previous owners Bill and Giuliana Rancic of reality show fame were instrumental in many of the design and decorating choices in the home. The front features a magnificent entry that leads into a gracious foyer, formal living room, kitchen and library. Built for entertaining, the home has grand views of the backyard and its outdoor kitchen, fire pits and beautiful landscaping.

Redefined Belgian Farmhouse
434 E. Sixth St.

This enchanting Belgian Farmhouse features reclaimed brick, white oak-planked floors and exposed beams in combination with contemporary elements. Natural lighting from large, expansive kitchen windows and no wall-mounted cabinetry provides sun-drenched days and sweeping views of the backyard. A formal bar replaces a typical butler's pantry, with dark walnut walls and a retro velvet papered ceiling, and is the Friday 5 o'clock meeting spot for the family.

Home Again
438 E. Ninth St.

This enchanting Colonial, the childhood residence of the homeowner, has been transformed from its original gracious decorating to a home that meets the needs of a busy, contemporary family. Most of the furnishings and lighting were designed by the homeowner, and each room features a combination of antiques and modern pieces, highlighted by sparkling light fixtures. Walk through the emerald green lacquered door in to the salvaged brick entry, and be wowed by the custom-built cabinets and furniture, bright pops of color and artwork from around the world.

Hinsdale Cooks! Kitchen Walk showcases architecture

Coming off of the first World War, the country's new-found economic growth, coupled with the increased prevalence of automobiles, provided a golden opportunity for people to leave the city. This exodus from Chicago created a real estate boom in Hinsdale that would help provide a canvas for young architects hoping to cement their brick and mortar legacy.

R. Harold Zook wasn't the only prominent architect in Hinsdale in the 1920s, but he captured people's imagination with his architecture designs, which included Tudor revivals and Cotswold cottages. These high-style design elements, including prow windows, faux thatched roofs, chevron patterns and of course Zook's signature spider webs reflected in stained glass and stone, are what modern-day architects say set these homes apart nearly 100 years on.

"People think of Hinsdale as a home town," said Lynne Smaczny, executive director of the Hinsdale Historical Society. "(The architecture) isn't glass and steel, it gives you a different feel, one of nostalgia — like the play "Our Town" with beautiful houses and tree-lined streets."

For the historical society, Zook's historical significance is important. In fact, the historical society maintains the R. Harold Zook Home and Studio, a Cotswold Cottage design of structures built in 1924 by Zook as his personal home and work space. Now located at Katherine Legge Memorial Park in Hinsdale, it was relocated from its original location on Fourth Street after a group of concerned citizens saw the looming tear-down threat it faced.

"The house hasn't been renovated at all yet," said Smaczny. "We are finishing work on the second floor of the studio. The long-term idea is that the studio will be finished and used as a space for an interactive exhibit where people can learn more about Zook's style and his work."

This Friday, May 9, more than 1,000 people will attend the annual Hinsdale Cooks! Kitchen Walk, which raises funds for the Historical Society to continue to provide education, as well as maintain key treasured buildings in the village. In fact, 10 percent of the Kitchen Walk proceeds will be designated to the society's Zook building preservation capital fund. Last year's event raised more than $100,000 for the organization.

Alexis Braden
Society spotlight

According to event co-chair Kate Marnell, eight Hinsdale homes, including her own Colonial, will be featured on the walk this year. The homes represent old and new construction in various styles ranging from Colonial Revival to the new Belgium Farmhouse.

And in a nod to the architect, the Kitchen Walk will highlight a classic Zook Tudor Revival located on South County Line Road. The home, which also boasts Dutch Colonial influences with its gabled roof, will allow guests to experience Zook's vision firsthand.

"Historical preservation is important to maintaining our village's heritage," Marnell said. "New houses are necessary and beautiful, but old houses have a history and a story (or in many cases, lots of stories). The (Kitchen Walk) is a great way to share and show the past to future generations."

The event will run from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will take place rain or shine. To see photos of the homes, turn to Page 17. To purchase tickets, $60 per person on the day of the event, please visit kitchen-walk.com.

SPORTS — ROUNDUP

STUDENT ATHLETE PROFILE

Name: Giselle Castaneda
Year: senior
Hometown: Westmont

What's your earliest memory of playing softball?

When I was 8 years old, I was playing in my park district and I remember pitching against my friends. I didn't want to strike them out, and I would feel sad if I did. I wanted them to get a hit.

What does it take to excel as a pitcher?

You can't really let things get to you. There's only certain things that you can control. If your defense makes a bad play, you can't let anything get to you as a pitcher. You kind of have to go with the flow as a pitcher and be pretty chill but still be on your toes.

How would your teammates describe you?

Some of my teammates call me pretty intense when I'm on the field, and that I can be intimidating. Off the field I can be goofy, and I like to play around a lot. I guess you can also say I'm a leader.

How do you see your role as a team captain?

Ever since I was a freshman, I just wanted to see this program skyrocket and be the best we can be. Being a captain is making sure your team is putting in the best you can with all your energy.

You're going to Dominican University to continue your playing career. What advice do you have for underclassmen Red Devils?

If you play team sports, know that it's not about you, it's about the team. You have to do what's best for the team and know the coach is doing what's best for the team.

Do you have any unique talents?

I can fall asleep anywhere, anytime, in any position. I fall asleep on the team bus, and sometimes I'll fall on the floor and won't wake up.

Why does coach Brittany Zust like having Castaneda on the squad?

Giselle Castaneda is a rock star senior for our squad. She brings the intensity and love for the game to life in each game and practice. Given that we have many girls on our team who have little to no softball background, G has really shown what it takes to play the game the right way. The best part is she does this in a manner that keeps her humble. There is no doubt that G is leaving her impact on this program and these girls for years to come.
