Pieces in place for new school year in Dist. 181

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

With the first day of school in Community Consolidated Elementary District 181 set for Friday, Aug. 23, district board members got reports from administrators on readiness for the 2019-20 school year.

John Munch, assistant superintendent of human resources, told the board that the teaching staff, as in years past, has both those with considerable experience and promising young ones.

"It's nice to have a good mix of experiences coming in as this cohort," Munch said.

A couple of late resignations were addressed, he noted, and that only one teaching position remained open as of Monday, with interviews already scheduled.

"So we're in a really good place to start the school year," he said. "All class sizes are below the class size guidelines, so we're in good shape there."

Regarding student achievement, Kathleen Robinson, assistant superintendent of learning reported that teachers will work to balance academic instruction and develop social emotional competencies.

"We'll look at high-impact teaching strategies and ensure that teachers are trained, and we're looking at expanding math interventions for students in our elementary schools who are struggling with mathematics," she said.

Tracy Miller, the district's new director of assessment, said the use of data and the district's web-based Mastery Manager tool to gauge student performance is expanding.

"We're continuing the implementation by training middle school math, science and world language teachers in the creation of assessments within the platform, while elementary educators will be training in administering the assessments," Miller said.

Mike Duggan, director of facilities, informed the board that the district's $1.36 million in summer renovations were all but wrapped up.

"We're finished with the capital projects everywhere, except the doors and hardware. We're installing them right now throughout Elm, Madison and CHMS," Duggan said. "The custodial staff is busy trying to get everything ready for next week."

One of the biggest projects was installation of maintenance-free tile flooring at Oak School.

Board member Margie Kleber remarked about impact of the upgrade.

"Oak School looked fabulous. It is such a huge improvement," she said. "You guys did a great job."

Duggan also reported that the district received a rebate of about $23,000 from ComEd for completing the installation of more efficient lighting at CHMS by June 30.

On the transportation front, Mohsin Dada, chief financial officer and treasurer, said 62 families had paid for busing as of Monday's meeting.

"They're all fully paid for, which is a big accomplishment," he said.

He noted that there could be as many as 40 more students using busing, based on those families that qualify. He said concerted efforts have been made to streamline the number of routes.

"We are trying to do everything possible to avoid duplication of routes as much as possible," he said, saying he hoped to have routes finalized by this week.

Teachers learn lessons in South Africa

Journey by members of Dist. 181 community to visit LEAP schools proves 'life-changing'

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

While temperatures were hitting all-time highs in Illinois, a group of teachers and administrators from Hinsdale District 181 were wearing winter coats to ward off a winter chill.

July is winter in South Africa, where a group from District 181 spent nearly two weeks of their summer break. Funded by the Casten Family Foundation and Tom and Judy Casten, the trip was an extension of a years-long cultural and professional exchange program between the teachers of Hinsdale and those in South Africa's LEAP schools.

Past summers have seen a group of educators from Hinsdale High School District 86 make the trip. This year, the opportunity was offered to the District 181 community. Amanda Campbell, a Spanish teacher at Hinsdale Middle School, said she knew right away that she wanted to be part of the group. She had been to South Africa before, but never with a focus on education.

Joining Campbell were District 181 Foundation Chair Meg Cooper and her husband, Brian; Kathy Robinson, assistant superintendent of learning; Clarendon Hills Middle School Principal Levi Brown, CHMS health teacher Mandy Knicker and Superintendent Hector Garcia.

The Coopers arrived a few days before the rest of the group to take in a safari and spend some time as tourists before embarking on the real purpose of the trip - to experience firsthand the work that's going on inside the country's LEAP schools.

Schools in the Langa Education Assistance Program, also known as LEAP Science and Math Schools, are secondary education schools located in three provinces in South Africa. The 181 group visited schools in two of those provinces - Gauteng, which is home to Johannesburg, and Western Cape, home of Cape Town.

Campbell said she expected to see a program still in development, but was surprised to find a group of teachers who were highly skilled and dedicated to their students.

"They were using techniques that we're still getting training on," Campbell said.

One technique that caught the attention of the 181 educators was a ritual called Life Enrichment Circles. The circles allow children a place to talk about their challenges, their struggles and to encourage one another. Robinson said talks already have begun about how the teachers and staff at District 181 schools can mimic what they saw in the LEAP schools to foster better relationships between teachers and students.

The visitors from Hinsdale enjoyed modern, comfortable accommodations on their trip. They paid a visit to an apartheid museum and enjoyed a safari, where they saw everything from zebras to hippos.

Perhaps most importantly, they spent time in the townships that LEAP students call home.

"It was important for us to see conditions kids come from," Robinson said.

Many children, Robinson said, live in homes without electricity or running water. Some have only one parent, while others have no parents at all.

Despite these challenges, and the great distance that some students must travel each day to get to school, Campbell and Robinson saw happy children who were succeeding in their studies. After a couple of days observing the schools, the teachers and their students, Robinson and Campbell arrived at a similar conclusion.

"It's very important for a child to feel connected at school," Robinson said.

There was plenty of work involved on the trip, but there also was time to enjoy the beauty of the country, and to take in sights they would never see in Hinsdale.

"We saw a baboon walking down the street," Robinson said.

Some of the food they enjoyed was equally exotic.

"We had some of the best food I've ever had in my life," said Campbell, who tried cow hooves for the first time. Others gave kudu and springbok a try. Both are breeds of antelope.

"I ate a lot of animals that I had never tried before," Campbell said.

When the teachers from South Africa visit Hinsdale in September, they will see how things are done in the District 181 schools and how the children of Hinsdale live.

In the end, Robinson said she was pleased to see that students in Hinsdale are in many ways similar to their peers in South Africa. They all want to be successful, to learn, and to be accepted by their peers.

"Our schools are so different-looking," Campbell said. But students and teachers in both schools have the same goals in mind.

The weather was cold, but Campbell said the welcome they received from their fellow educators was nothing but warm.

"We didn't feel like guests. We felt like partners," said Campbell, who said she hopes the LEAP teachers feel the same when they visit Hinsdale.

Campbell said her middle school Spanish students will notice right away the effects of her summer vacation. She said it will show in how she interacts with her students, and how those students are encouraged to participate.

"I'm not exaggerating when I say it was life-changing," Campbell said.

Longtime village cop reflects on a career impacting others

Hinsdale police officer Mike Coughlin could have handed in his badge in January after 30 years of service. But duty kept him on a few more months.

"I wanted to finish out the school year," said the longtime juvenile and crime prevention officer and familiar figure to current and former Hinsdale youth. "I didn't want to leave them high and dry."

Off Cough, as he is affectionately called, retired from the force earlier this month, ending a community-focused career in which he also led the D.A.R.E. program in schools and the department's Citizens Police Academy. Interacting with residents, particularly the younger ones, was his favorite assignment.

"I did Safety Village all the way to the high school level, so that was kind of my role," he said.

Losing both parents when he was 20 left Coughlin responsible for raising his four younger siblings. Out of that tragedy emerged an officer accustomed to guiding others in making wise choices.

The Chicago native grew up set on becoming a firefighter, even vowing to his grandmother that he'd become one. Ultimately, however, he followed his younger brother into the field of criminal justice, taking night school classes at a junior college. He fared pretty well on his first police test but knew he could do better on his second effort.

"I applied myself and the next thing you know I ranked No. 1 (among test takers) in four towns," Coughlin said, one of which was Hinsdale.

He called his grandmother with the good news.

"Her comment was, 'But you always said you wanted to be a fireman,'" he recounted with a laugh.

Coughlin had to come to terms with the limits of his enforcement authority. He recalled one of his first shifts in which he arrested a suspect for damaging the Hinsdale train station.

"He was charged and, before you know it, he got out on bond and he left," he related, feeling discouraged at the time. "When you're young, you're gung-ho and you want to change the world. The older you get, you realize you can't do all those things."

Thankfully, Halloween has become less "horrible," Coughlin said, describing the widespread incidents of mischief and vandalism that typically marred the night.

"We had a paddy wagon set up at Robbins Park," he said. "Nobody could get a day off, everybody had to work."

He started giving boxes of glow necklaces to his colleagues for them to hand out as they patrolled to engender a more family-friendly environment. Making officers more approachable factor was his aim.

"I want to be there if (residents) have a challenge or a problem, and for them not to be afraid of police officers," he said.

Coughlin's positive example has had life-shaping results, including one kid who grew up to become a detective with the Chicago Police Department.

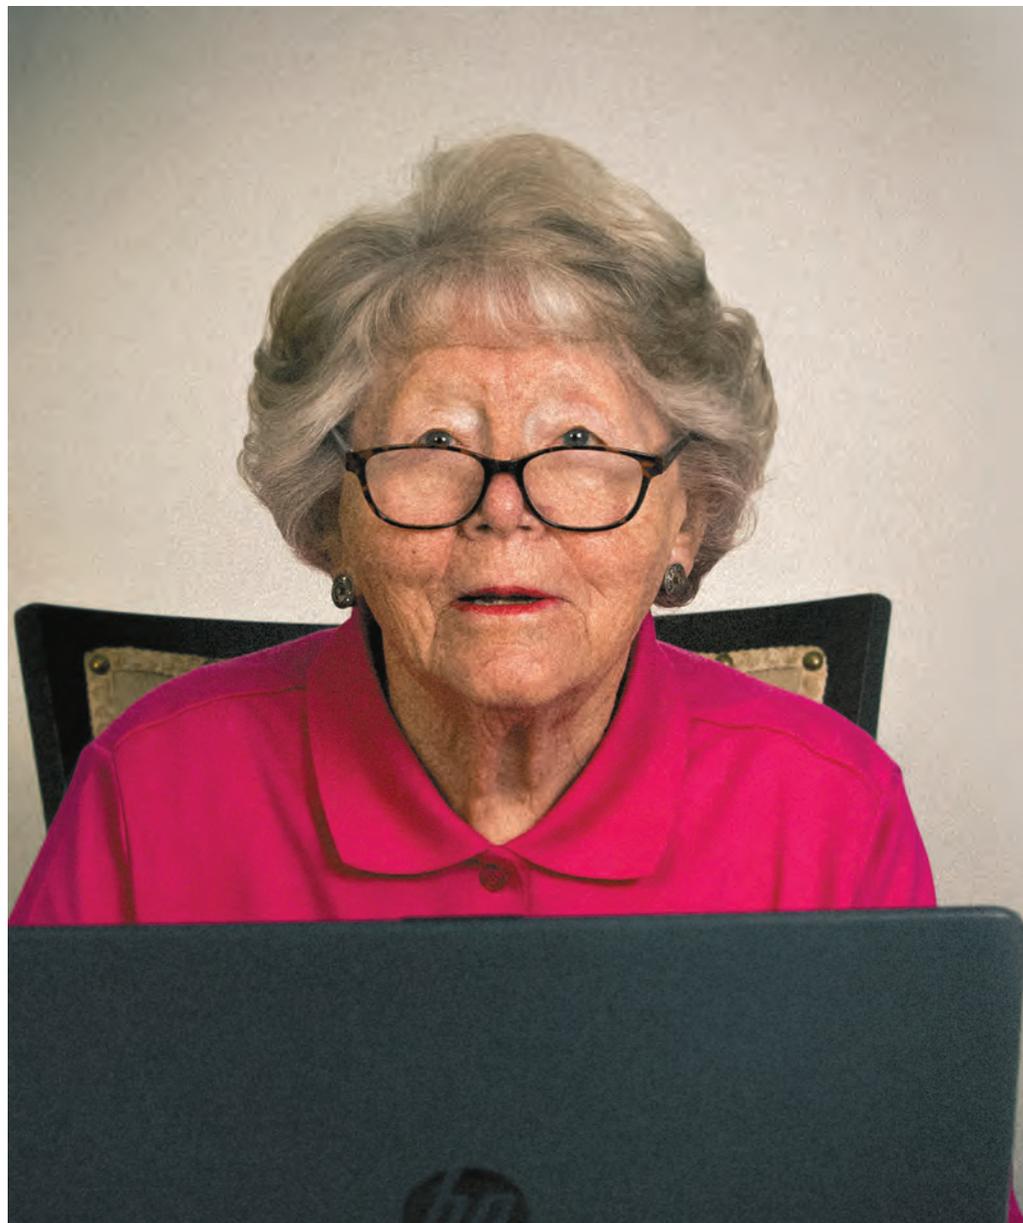

"You never know what effect you're going to have on someone," he said.

Plan ahead to go back to school with (some) peace

A new school year is beginning (yikes!), marking the annual abrupt end to summer vacation and the frenzied first day approach. This week's expert, District 181 teacher Jessica Schultz, offers useful advice on starting the year strong (see Page 14). Here are some other tips that can smooth out re-entry, courtesy of pbs.com.

- Meet the new teacher

One of the biggest back-to-school fears is "Will I like my new teacher?" Break the ice early by taking advantage of a school open house or back-to-school night.

Some teachers welcome phone calls or e-mails — another great opportunity to get to know each other before the year begins. Also, try locating the teacher's picture on a school website or in a yearbook to put the name with a face. If the teacher sends a welcome letter, be sure to read the letter together.

- Tour the school

If the school hosts an open house, be sure to go. Becoming familiar with the environment will go a long way toward settling a nervous stomach on the first day. Meet the teacher together, find his or her desk, or explore the playground. Ask older children returning to a school to lead the tour. This will help refresh all of your memories.

- Connect with friends

A familiar friend can make all the difference when heading back to school. Consider calling parents from last year's class and finding out who will be classmates. Refresh these relationships before school starts by scheduling a play date or a school carpool.

- Tool up

Having the right tools is key. While keeping basic needs in mind, allow for a couple of splurges like a cool notebook or a favorite-colored pen. These simple pleasures make going back to school a lot more fun. Get your child excited about upcoming projects by explaining how new supplies might be used, and practice using ones that are unfamiliar to build a sense of comfort for use in class.

- Avoid last-minute drilling

While it is important to support learning throughout the summer, don't spend the last weeks of summer vacation reviewing last year's curriculum. All kids need some down time before the rigors of school begin. For some kids, last-minute drills can heighten anxiety, reminding them of what they've forgotten instead of what they remember. Giving clear messages is important; chat about today's events and tomorrow's plans.

- Ease into the routine

Switching from a summer to a school schedule can be stressful to everyone in the household. Avoid first-day-of-school mayhem by practicing your routine a few days in advance. Set the alarm clock, go through your morning rituals, and get in the car or to the bus stop on time. Routines help children feel comfortable, and establishing a solid school routine will help iron out those back-to-school bumps.

Lost and not found items haunt my house

Has anyone seen my white go-go boots?

Yes, I actually own white go-go boots. I acquired them a few years back when I had to dress up like a University of Illinois cheerleader for a scene in the Community Revue.

I might need to wear them again in this year's show, and I have no idea where they are. They are not in the plastic bin that has been officially designated as The Spot to hold all revue and Halloween costume items. They are not in the guest room closet, which has been unofficially designated as The Spot for a strange assortment of objects that have no other home.

My husband, in a desperate attempt to calm me down the other night, said he would help me look for the missing footwear. He at times has had difficulty finding a jar of mustard in the fridge, so I took a pass on his kind offer.

I've lived in my house almost seven years and I know where to locate most of the things I own. But there are several objects I can't seem to find.

The go-go boots, for one. A pair of black capri stretch pants. A pair of reading glasses (I have only two from the three-pack). "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" on CD.

I know of several times I have conducted frenzied searches for other items, many of which I have never located. But these are the ones that come to mind right now.

I also know from interviewing an organizing expert last month that if everything had its place in my house, I would have immediate access to whatever I was looking for.

I confess I dream of such a day, when clearly labeled bins and cabinets in the basement hold all the belongings I use on an infrequent basis — and all of the belongings I used 10 years ago or might use 10 years from now have been tossed.

I can come up with several really good excuses as to why my home is not more organized. The truth is, as much as I love organization, I am less enchanted with the prospect of actually throwing things away.

I apparently have passed this trait along to my daughter, who at times is unwilling to part with a gum wrapper, lest she might need it for some unexpected craft opportunity. I don't want her to become a hoarder and have to listen to lectures from my future grandchildren asking how I allowed their mother to grow up like that.

The truth is, the thought of actually cleaning out our basement storage room (which one day will make a fantastic game room) is daunting. I chastise my husband for saying things like, "We need a day when we can really clean up the yard."

"We're never going to have a whole day," I tell him. "We need to do a little bit at a time."

And that's why I need to do — lower my expectations so I see the disposal of an item or two a day as a major accomplishment. In just one month, I could get 60 things out of the house. That would be real progress!

In the meantime, I will say a prayer to St. Anthony, the patron saint of lost things, for help with the boots. I am not Catholic, but he has taken pity on me in the past and reunited me with various objects I have misplaced.

I hope he hears my prayer. If not, the next thing I lose might be my sanity.

— Pamela Lannom is on vacation. This column was first published Feb. 16, 2017. The go-go boots are still missing.

Seeking clarity amidst the clamor

On Thursday morning, the alarms went off. All of them. Every cell phone. Every egg timer. Every theft alert in every Walgreens, Walmart, Best Buy and bank. In an instant, every man, woman and child was awash in the an old friend. Some of the alarms helped the people realize that, after all these years, it really was about time. And they picked up the phone or pen to call or write, while others went right on over there to confess how they'd felt clanging, clicking, beeping, buzzing, trilling, chiming, whooping, squealing cacophony that blanketed the Earth.

Sump pump alarms sent homeowners scrambling to the basement and crashing through dusty cardboard boxes, wondering if maybe it wasn't time to start Marie Kondo-ing some of this old junk. Elevator alarms evoked such a jolt that passengers decided they ought to start taking the stairs (much to the delight of their spouses). Whining car alarms drove their owners to throw up their hands and walk where they needed to go, and the walks became strolls, and it turned out that strolls are actually very nice.

Outlook crashed, of course, under the weight of billions of notifications — wheezing a final, feeble "Ding!" as it went. But that was OK, because the most important conversations happened anyway, coordinated out of shared care for a common cause.

Church bells — many long out of use — sprang to life in unison. And the music drifting through the neighborhoods was sweet nectar to parched souls, and the people found themselves wandering into sanctuaries they hadn't entered in ages to visit for all these years. And in the urgency of the deafening din, many of them found that they suddenly had the courage to say the difficult things that needed saying, like "I love you" and "I'm sorry" and "I forgive you" and "Goodbye."

When billions of pockets erupted with irksome pings that existed solely for their own sake, the people decided that maybe it didn't matter so much who had tagged them or liked that or retweeted the thing that What's-Her-Face had said. So they turned off the notifications and put the buzzing doodads away, and the quiet that followed was like a breath of fresh air on a still lake after months trapped in a noisy subway car.

On Thursday night, the alarms stopped as abruptly as they'd begun. Some of the people went back to business as usual, but most didn't. Most of them held onto what the alarms had taught them, and they slept very well that night — the first truly peaceful sleep in a long while. And on Friday morning they awoke gently to the singing of the birds.

JESSICA SCHULTZ, ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHER

How should families ready for the start of school?

With just one week left before the first day of the new school year, many children might be tempted to cram as much summer as possible into their final days of vacation.

But Jessica Schultz, a teacher on special assignment with Hinsdale Elementary District 181, suggests easing in with a few simple but important changes in the week before classes begin.

For most kids, the first thing on the back-to-school to-do list should be an earlier bedtime. Schultz suggests moving bedtime up by 10 or 15 minutes each night in the days or weeks before the start of the new year, and be sure to cut out all electronics a couple of hours prior to lights out.

"Spend some time doing something calming," Schultz suggests.

A great way to wind down for bedtime is by reading one of the books on District 181's suggested summer reading list. Schultz said the list, which went home with students last spring, contains fun, lighthearted reads that will set the tone for a good night's sleep.

"The beginning of the year can be a really exciting time for students," said Schultz, who spent 10 years as a third-grade teacher before taking on her current assignment. But while some are eager to discover their new classroom and meet their new teacher, such changes can cause anxiety in others.

Parents should watch for signs that their child might be stressed about going back to school, such as resistance to bedtime or suggestions that they aren't excited, and give them a chance to share their worries.

Earlier bedtimes can be hard to adjust to, but earlier mornings are even harder. Schultz suggests preparing the night before by deciding what children will wear and what they will eat for breakfast the next day.

"That makes the routine a little smoother in the morning," she said.

As for breakfast, she encourages students to enjoy a healthy breakfast that's high in protein and low in sugar.

"You want to avoid that mid-morning sugar crash," she said.

The same goes for lunch. When packing a lunch, include fruits, vegetables and a sandwich that contains some sort of protein. Avoid sugary drinks and snacks, Schultz said.

School might mark the unofficial end of summer, but Mother Nature doesn't always follow the school calendar. Schultz encourages students to stay hydrated in the late-summer heat by packing a water bottle along with their school supplies.

Finally, if your middle school student hasn't completed the required summer math homework, now is the time. Schultz said teachers will be collecting summer math packets during the first week of school. They can be found on Skyward.

Optional math packets also are available for younger students who might want to brush up on their skills before returning to class.

Children who aren't happy about the return of early bedtimes and waking up to an alarm clock might find solace in knowing that they're not the only ones getting used to a new routine.

"I do give the same advice to teachers," Schultz said.

Greg DiDomenico, president of Community Memorial Foundation in Hinsdale, has been appointed board chairman of Forefront, the nation's only statewide membership association for nonprofits, grant-makers, public agencies and advisors.

He has served on Forefront's board of directors since 2017, most recently as treasurer.

"I am extremely honored to serve as Forefront's newest board chair," DiDomenico said. "The organization has a long history of excellent stewardship, and I'm proud to continue the board's work of creating a vibrant social impact sector throughout Illinois."

Forefront President and CEO Eric Weinheimer said the organization is delighted to have DiDomenico serving in this role.

ues the critical role that Forefront plays in creating an environment in which all nonprofits and foundations in Illinois can do their best work," Weinheimer said.

HHS HELPS IN WAKE OF BARRY

Hinsdale Humane Society welcomed 25 cats and 18 dogs from Plaquemines Animal Welfare Society in New Orleans last month.

PAWS was relocating as many animals as possible in preparation for Tropical Storm Barry in the event the area flooded and hundreds of rescued animals would be brought to PAWS, causing them to be in need of extra room at the shelter.

In addition to the 43 animals from PAWS, HHS welcomed 10 cats from Louisiana SPCA. Of those animals, 20 cats and 5 dogs became residents of the Tuthill Family Pet Rescue & Resource Center, with the rest going to A.D.O.P.T.

in Naperville. All the animals received vaccinations, including rabies vaccines, and medical evaluations. Three of the five dogs had heartworm and several of the cats went straight to our isolation kennels.

One of the dogs and six of the cats have been adopted.

Local theater companies ready their stages for new season of productions

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

Whether you're looking for drama, mystery or an emotional musical experience, it can be found on a stage not far from home.

New shows are opening at theaters throughout the area, offering Hinsdaleans and their neighbors quality live entertainment without the trip to the city. Here are few to consider:

• 'Agatha Christie's Murder in the Studio'

Sept. 5-14

Theatre of Western Springs
4384 Hampton Ave.

Theatre of Western Springs opens its 91st season with a trio of mysteries by Agatha Christie. But like any good Agatha Christie story, this performance comes with its share of surprises, said director Jay Fontanetta.

Fontanetta said the tales known as "Agatha Christie's Murder in the Studio" are usually performed as radio plays, with actors reading from the script on a stage free of props or staging and a foley artist creating the sounds that drive the story along.

The TWS audience will see a more traditional stage production while retaining the radio play's visible foley deck.

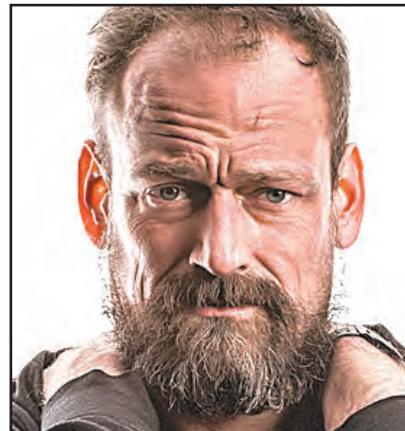

The show's 20 cast members will have roles to play in all three of the production's short plays, each taking a major role in one show, a smaller role in another and serving as foley artist for a third.

It's a unique experience for both the actors and the audience, Fontanetta said.

While the sound effects will be visible to the audience, the show's props will remain invisible. With the exception of large items such as chairs, most of the play's objects will be mimed by the actors.

It's an added step in the already challenging task of presenting a mystery on stage. Fontanetta said actors of this genre must build tension and suspense without ever letting on that they know how the story ends.

"I love mysteries. I love trying to craft ways to surprise an audience," Fontanetta said. "I think it's going to be a lot of fun."

Showtimes are 8 p.m. Sept. 5-7 & 12-14; 2:30 p.m. Sept. 8, 14 & 15; and 7:30 p.m. Sept. 8.

Tickets are $22-$24. Call (708) 246-3380 or visit theatrewesternsprings.com.

• 'The Guys'

Sept. 9-11

First Folio Theater
Mayslake Peabody Estate
1717 W. 31st St., Oak Brook

"The Guys," by Anne Nelson, was first performed in 2002 by Bill Murray and Sigourney Weaver. Seventeen years later, the story of Joan, a writer and editor, and Nick, a New York fire captain, is being told on the First Folio stage in Oak Brook.

Lydia Berger Gray and Mark Montgomery make up the two-person cast of this story about two people whose lives come together as the result of the tragedies of 9/11. Like most people in the days that followed, Joan longed for a way to help. She finds it helping Nick with the seemingly insurmountable task of eulogizing the members of his department who were lost in the day's events.

"It's a really beautiful exploration of how people need to tell their stories and how we all have stories to share," said Melanie Keller, First Folio's associate artistic director and director of "The Guys." Based on a true story, "The Guys" revisits an experience shared by all Americans and explores the bonds we share simply by being human.

A portion of ticket sales will be donated to the 9/11 Memorial & Museum in New York.

Shows are at 8 p.m.
Tickets are $35. Call (630) 986-8067 or visit firstfolio.org.

• 'The Color Purple'

Sept. 13-Nov. 3

Drury Lane Theatre
100 Drury Lane, Oakbrook Terrace

Drury Lane Theatre continues its 2019-20 season with the Tony Award winning musical, "The Color Purple." Based on the Pulitzer winning novel by Alice Walker, the production chronicles the loves, losses, struggles and triumphs of Celie, an African American woman in the American Theater lovers don't have to travel far to find fresh, live entertainment this fall. At top, Julie Tomek Campo, Kevin Wilson and Rachel Gilbert appear in a scene from the Theatre of Western Springs' season opener, "Agatha Christie's Murder in the Studio." Above right, Eben Logan stars as Celie in Drury Lane Theatre's "The Color Purple." Lydia Berger Gray and Mark Montgomery, left, make up the two-person cast of "The Guys," at First Folio.

South during the early 1900s.

"It's a gorgeous story about a woman's journey to freedom," said the show's director, Lili-Anne Brown.

Brown appeared in Drury Lane's 2007 rendition of "The Buddy Holly Story" and is thrilled to be back, this time at the helm of one of her favorite productions.

"I've seen it dozens of times in my life," she said. "The story is one that means a lot to me personally."

Brown remarked that the show's cast of 17 reads like a "best of the best" list of Chicago talent. Using Alice Walker's words, the songs carry the story and the emotion of Celie's journey, she said.

Paired with the choreography of Breon Arzell, Brown said "The Color Purple" is sure to be an emotional experience for all who attend.

Showtimes are 1:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursdays; 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays, 3 p.m. Saturdays, and 2 and 6 p.m. Sundays.

Tickets are $55-$70. Call (630) 530-0111 or visit drurylanetheatre.com.

Local Realtor Highly Recommended

What impressed us immediately about Carol Lee was her detailed research and preparation before even listing our house. Her experience and knowledge of the Hinsdale market, down to a block by block level, were critical in selling our home on a timely basis. Her assessment of the pluses and minuses of our home and how they related to current market conditions led to important changes in strategy and presentation resulting in a successful sale. During the time our house was on the market she was involved with us on a daily basis offering help and suggestions going way beyond our expectations. Carol Lee led us through the entire process, communicating extremely well and positioning our house to the fullest advantage. She is a consummate professional, very pleasant to work with, and we are so glad we chose her as our realtor.

Griffin ready to tackle job of head coach worked with, including three head coaches at Central.

"I think you just learn a little bit from everyone," he said. "You've got to find out what is yours and then get everybody on board with you."

He hopes to do so with this year's theme, "All In."

"My big program vision is that everyone can have a place if you're willing to work hard and commit to something bigger than yourself," he said.

"Kids thrive when they feel like they belong, and you can only feel like you belong if you feel like you have an impact on your environment," Griffin added. "What I love about football is there are a hundred different roles for people to fill."

At Wheaton, Griffin said that, while he never played in meaningful games, the experience helped shape his vision.

"Those years in college were formative for me as a person and it had very little to do with football," he said. "If you're only worrying about the 22 guys who are playing, I think you really miss an opportunity to help kids be better people and better citizens."

His concern about students as more than football players does not go unnoticed by those he coaches, according to Grant Pitcher, who had Griffin as linebacker and special teams coach when he played linebacker in 2014.

"Coach Griff cared far more about making us better men than football players, which is saying a lot considering his dedication to our on-field performance," Pitcher said, adding that he couldn't think of anyone better suited to lead the team.

Griffin is confident his coaching staff shares his vision. The group includes some new faces and some familiar faces in new roles.

The entire program, freshman to varsity, lost six coaches when Hartman left, including three on the varsity level.

"I've got some great guys who are really great with kids," he said. "They see the bigger picture beyond football and want to help positively impact kids and grow them in their character and their integrity."

Knowing the players and the program has made the transition much easier, Griffin said, but his new title has not come without a few surprises.

"(It's) the number of small decisions that you didn't know that your input mattered on or things I just never even thought about," he said, such as the logo design on the team's practice T-shirts. "When you're an assistant coach, you show up and you coach."

One responsibility he will retain from his days as an assistant is delivering the post-game speech to the team.

"You try to play to your strengths, and I think one of my strengths is being positive and encouraging kids and trying to find out what motivates them," he said.

He continues to appreciate the community support the program receives.

"One of the strong suits of Hinsdale Central football that has always been there and continues to be there is we have such positive involvement, from the parents to the players to the community," he said. "That's something that is just incredible to be a part of."

"It just makes it fun. I'm excited to still be a part of that — just in a different role."

Griffin ready to tackle job of head coach

Central graduate, longtime assistant coach excited to lead program he knows so well

Brian Griffin knows Dickinson Field.

He played there as a member of a 2002 Red Devil football team that was undefeated until the state semifinals.

He's paced the sidelines during games in a variety of roles, including varsity linebackers coach, special teams coach and, most recently, defensive coordinator.

He's stood in the center of the huddle midfield, congratulating players after a win and consoling them after a loss.

Now Griffin, 34, is preparing for his first season as varsity head football coach.

“It was something I always kind of thought I would end up doing, but it was never the ultimate goal,” he said. “The ultimate goal was always to impact kids.

“It is exciting to have a little greater influence and to be able to impact more kids in a substantial way,” he added.

Hinsdale Central athletic director Dan Jones said he was happy to bring on a coach who has a history with the program and will bring longevity to the position.

“He is a graduate of HCHS and came back home after college to work and coach here,” Jones said. “He brings that pride and tradition to everything he does as head coach.”

Griffin's promotion marked the end of a turbulent spring for the football program, which was among several Central

After playing for the Red Devils and serving as an assistant coach for 11 years, Brian Griffin has stepped into the role of head coach at Hinsdale Central. He plans sports cut pending the results of the $139 million facilities referendum on April 2. The measure passed, but five-year head coach Dan Hartman had already announced he was leaving to lead rival Lyons Township High School's program.

Griffin, a Wheaton College graduate, was elevated to Central head coach April 24, and he said enthusiasm has been rising, too.

“There has just been a great energy from the coaches we have to the players to the parents. Everyone is really excited and positive. That's been fun,” he said.

That energy helped propel him through an accelerated ramp-up to the start of practices June 17.

“I had less than two months to do a whole off-season of work,” he said. “It's kind of been a blur because it's happened so quickly.”

This year also has been an eventful one for Griffin personally. He and his wife, Kelly, welcomed baby Brennan in January. They also are parents to Logan, 4, and Halle, 2, “Life is busy. The coaches have been awesome. People have picked up the slack and helped me out as I have transitioned,” he said.

Griffin said he's drawing on lessons he learned from other coaches he's to continue to give his post-game address to the team, as he did after last year's win against Oak Park at Dickinson Field. (file photo)
