Wright home might be in jeopardy

Preservationists worry home at 121 S. County Line Road could be sold to a builder

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdaleans for Historic Preservation and the Frank Lloyd Wright Building Conservancy are hoping to save the Frederick Bagley House at 121 S. County Line Road.

The conservancy sent out an email about the 1894 home Friday, indicating the "unique and irreplaceable early work" of Wright's was being marketed by @properties to a limited audience and was at risk.

"The house has no legal protection, and it would appear the audience for this sale is primarily developers who would demolish the house in order to build a larger house," the release states. "This practice is common in Hinsdale and has already happened on the lots immediately to the north and south of the Bagley house."

The five-bedroom, 3.1-bath home was listed at $1.3 million, according to Google search results. But the link to the actual listing is no longer active.

Alexis Braden, a Hinsdale Historic Preservation commissioner and founder of the Hinsdaleans for Historic Preservation Facebook group, said she learned from a real estate agent friend that the property had gone on the market and notified the conservancy, with whom she had had conversations in 2019.

"We were worried it would only attract buyers who weren't able or willing to rehab it and were only looking at it as land," she said.

The use of the phrase "as is" in the description led her to one conclusion.

"Knowing Hinsdale, land is really valuable and it looked like an attractive piece of land for a builder or a developer," she said.

Several concerned parties emailed the village over the weekend, worried the home could be facing demolition, the village website states. The property is not designated as a local landmark and is not located in the Robbins Park

Historic District.

The village also posted a statement real estate agency @properties released about the listing.

"121 County Line Road in Hinsdale will present a unique opportunity for a renovation or restoration of a Chicago-area home originally designed by Frank Lloyd Wright with modifications made throughout its history," the statement read. "Contrary to reports, the home is not being marketed as a teardown and is not being sold via auction. The property will be listed publicly for sale later this year."

The village will continue to monitor the situation and will provide assistance to encourage preservation, its website states. Residents with questions are encouraged to call Bethany Salmon, village planner, at (630) 789-7035 or email her at bsalmon@villageofhinsdale.org.

The Dutch colonial was originally designed for Frederick Bagley, a marble importer. The first floor plan of the main block of the house is similar to that of Wright's own 1889 home in Oak Park, and its octagonal library is a precursor of Wright's 1898 Oak Park Studio library, according to the conservancy.

"The vulnerability of this significant work of an architect of recognized international importance demonstrates the precarious status of historic structures in affluent areas," the conservancy's release states. "The Bagley House is a vital part of Wright's canon and its loss would be tragic for the Wright community, historians and architecture lovers everywhere."

Braden said she and other preservation commissioners are working hard to revise Title 14 of the Hinsdale Village Code with the hope of preserving historic homes like this one.

As for the Bagley house, she hopes to call attention to the property nationwide and "find a buyer who doesn't necessarily live in Hinsdale but wants to work to preserve it."

ONCE UPON A TIME

Vacation destination — According to Sandy Williams’ book, “Images of America — Hinsdale,” KLM was once a vacation spot. “Alexander Legge, president of International Harvester, and his wife, Katherine, purchased 52 acres on South County Line Road in 1915 for use as a summer residence and farm. After Katherine died suddenly in 1924, Legge dedicated this property in her name for use as a retreat by the female employees of Harvester. Do you have a Hinsdale photo that is at least 25 years old? # Birders enjoy hobby with eye to the sky

Trips provide great opportunities to spot new birds, but many can be found in backyard

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

The sparks that flew during Christian Goers' honeymoon to South Africa weren't all for his new wife.

As the couple celebrated their new marriage in 2008, Goers discovered a fascination in the country's many bird species, igniting an interest that would last for years to come.

"I saw birds I had never seen before," said Goers, who has since traveled the world with his eye to the sky. He said there are new and different birds to be seen wherever he travels, including back home in Illinois.

Spring is the best time to be a birder in Illinois, Goers said. That's when birds are making their north from their winter getaways. That's also when the plumage of many birds is the most impressive.

"This time of year, I like to go out into the prairie areas," said Goers, noting that thick foliage in the wooded areas can make birding tough in the summer and early fall. Now through fall also is a good time to spot shorebirds, Goers said. Sandpipers and killdeer are among the species that stop in Illinois on their way south for the winter.

■ SUMMER PURSUITS

in a series on summer hobbies*

Not all birders are driven by the same goals. Some search out multiple birds of a single species, while other birders set out to find as many different varieties of birds as possible. Goers said he tends toward the latter. And while it might be considered a passive pastime by many, there is a competitive component for birders who pursue what's known as a "big year."

A big year is a personal challenge, or sometimes a casual competition between birders, to identify as many species as possible in a single year within a specific geographic area. Goers hasn't participated in a "big year" challenge, but he did join other members of the DuPage Birding Club in a "big day" competition in which teams of four spent 12 hours searching out birds across the county. Goers' team came out on top, he said, with more than 90 species.

That's solid proof that birders don't have to travel far to see a wide variety of bird species. In fact, Goers has seen more than 100 different kinds of birds right in his own backyard.

Christian Goers is always on the lookout for birds and never embarks on a hike without his binoculars. Flowers, feeders and water

His yard offers four feeders and a few hummingbird feeders stocked with food to satisfy a range of diet preferences. Black sunflower attracts many varieties of birds, while shelled peanuts are a preferred snack of woodpeckers and nuthatches, Goers said. Oranges attract orioles in the spring.

features all help Sue Riefe attract a variety of birds to her Hinsdale yard. (Jim Slonoff photos)

The feeders, along with native plants, have created a sanctuary for Goers and his feathered visitors.

Backyard bird haven

Birder and fellow DuPage Birding Club member Sue Riefe said feeders are just one of many ways she brings birds to her yard. Along with her feeders, she has filled her yard with plants that attract birds and provide them with food without the need for birdseed. She said hummingbirds love salvia and the bright red blossoms of cardinal flower, while goldfinches eat the seeds from her coneflowers. The berries on her serviceberry bush are a treat for a variety of birds, Riefe said.

She also provides shelter with bird houses, one of which is currently home to a house wren.

Finally, Riefe uses water to bring birds to her yard. A fountain with a bubbler, along with a bird bath with a mister, give visitors a place to cool off and hydrate.

Riefe said her interest in birds goes back to the time she spent with her grandmother as a child.

"She was my inspiration for birding," Riefe said.

Just as food isn't the only way to attract a bird, sight isn't the only way to identify a species. At College of DuPage, Riefe took a class that taught her to identify birds by their sounds and used her new-found skills during birding trips to the Indiana Dunes and Stevens Point, Wis. More recently, she made her first trip to a spot known as the Magic Hedge at Montrose Point Bird Sanctuary along Montrose Beach in Chicago.

Like nearly all birders, Riefe embarks on her birding trips with binoculars in hand.

But designated outings aren't the only opportunities to spot a new or unique species. Riefe has spotted a wild turkey on her street in Hinsdale and saw great horned owls nesting on Lincoln Street.

"I always take my binoculars whenever I go anywhere," she said.

With more people spending more time at home over the past year, Riefe said she has received her share of texts, emails and phone calls from folks who are noticing their own backyard birds for the first time. She said she's happy to answer their questions and to welcome new people to the world of birding.

"I'm always trying to get people interested in birds," she said.

Within 30 minutes a cardinal, a house wren, a hummingbird and a downy woodpecker all paid Riefe's yard a visit Tuesday morning for a quick snack. (Jim Slonoff photos)

MEETING ROUNDUP

Hinsdale High School District 86 Board

Among other business July 21, board members:

- listened to the district's attorney, Steven Richart, discuss the determination by Illinois Attorney General Office's Public Access Counselor that the board improperly took final action on an adaptive pause at a meeting last year. Maryam Judar of the Citizen Advocacy Center asked the PAC to review the board's informal vote during its Nov. 19, 2020, meeting on Superintendent Tammy Prentiss' proposal to take an adaptive pause, though the matter was not on the meeting agenda. "The board's vote to reject the adaptive pause was a final action taken without proper notice on the agenda," stated the PAC ruling. Richart said he disagreed with the PAC's interpretation of "final action" because Prentiss had authority to institute a pause with or without board consent. The ruling did not require the district to take further action, Richart said, but he recommended the board remain mindful of itemizing its agenda items and identifying whether the board will take action.

- were told that, per the current guidance from the CDC and IDPH, wearing face coverings in district buildings during the 2021-22 school year will be optional for everyone, but strongly encouraged for those who are not vaccinated. However, face coverings will have to be worn by everyone when they are riding on a school bus. District 86 will return to in-person instruction on a full-time basis for all students. Mitigation protocols will be maintained regarding ventilation, hand hygiene, cleaning buildings and social distancing of three feet.

- rescinded the temporary rules for board meetings established last year during the COVID-19 pandemic. The rules allowed board members to attend board meetings and committee meetings remotely. It also provided for board meetings to be live-streamed, and enabled the public to submit public comments at meetings remotely, whether orally or in writing.

Slight uptick in COVID-19 cases over past week

Eight new Hinsdale residents have tested positive for COVID-19 over the past week.

The DuPage County Health Department reported eight new cases, and the Cook County Health Department reported no new cases.

That brings the total number of reported cases in the village to 1,836, compared to 1,828 last week.

Amita Hinsdale Hospital had one confirmed COVID-19 patient and one patient awaiting test results as of Monday, a spokesman said.

The rolling seven-day positivity rate for Region 8, which includes DuPage County, was 3.7 percent on Saturday, compared to 2.2 percent a week prior.

Illinois has administered 13.1 million doses of vaccines. An average of 17,776 doses are being administered daily, compared to about 19,569 last week.

More than 59 percent of DuPage County residents are fully vaccinated.

Middle ground eyed in D86 science battle

New physics-first sequence remains, but students still can take biology-chemistry-physics

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale High School District 86 students will have some latitude in choosing science classes starting in the 2022-23 school year under a compromise plan.

After more than two hours of discussion on the contentious issue of science sequencing at the July 22 meeting, board members came to consensus. They directed administrators to plan to offer the previously approved physics-chemistry-biology model while also allowing students to take the newly developed courses in the traditional biology-first order.

"I want to see students at both schools be able to make an individualized decision to optimize their opportunities in science," board member Debbie Levinthal said in supporting the dual pathways.

Under the so-called modified plan,

— Debbie Levinthal

students can choose the new sequence of Physics in the Universe, Chemistry of Earth Systems and Biology of the Living Earth, or instead start with BOTLE or AP Physics I. Under this plan, freshman and juniors could be in the same class.

The previous board had approved the new sequence in an effort to align the two high schools' science curriculums while meeting the criteria of the state's new science standards. Hinsdale South has followed the physics-first model for a decade, but it would be a new approach at Hinsdale Central.

The "physics first" approach became a lightning rod in April's election, and the four board members elected all expressed resistance to the sequence change and the increased integration of earth science.

Board member Jeff Waters had asked the administration to explore the cost of preserving the existing science classes alongside the new classes, saying he is concerned about lack of rigor of the classes and the limitations of a single science path.

"The genesis of my concern ... is the de-contenting that I believe to exist when I see Physics in the Universe as the sole offering," he said.

Administrators reported that model, identified as Option 3, would cost $1.6 million a year due to staffing needed and the high likelihood of smaller class sizes as students are spread among more classes.

Levinthal said for some students, taking biology freshman year is preferable option.

But proponents of the new sequence say earth science-related material will comprise only about 20 to 30 percent of the content and that the courses have been created to build on concepts from one year to the next in concert with state standards.

"The idea here is that the science teachers have created a build-upon schedule based on over a decade's worth of experience at Hinsdale South," said board member Eric Held. "By recommending a linked sequence, we're saying this is a pedagogically sound order of study for the students."

Hinsdale South Principal Arwen Pokorny-Lyp said her school has seen strong results from its physics-first experience as it optimizes instruction by eliminating redundancies and showing connections between the subjects.

"Our AP Bio scores are higher than they were previously when we did not do physics-chem-bio," she said. "No one feels that opportunities were taken away from students."

Lower class sizes could result from the expanded offerings, administrators reported, estimating that every additional section below the district's class size parameters would cost about $20,000. At Hinsdale South, that would mean the addition of staff for AP Physics 1, Biology of the Living Earth Honors and AP Physics C-M.

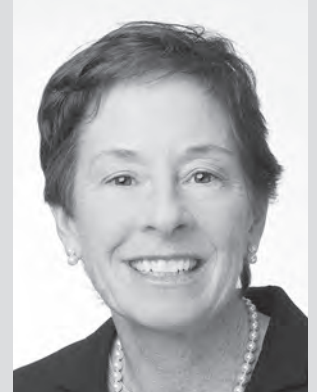

Board member Kathleen Hirsman, a supporter of the new sequence, voiced discomfort at making financial decisions without the counsel of Chief Financial Officer Josh Stephenson, who was absent. She also vented her frustration at the protracted discussion.

"We need to figure out where we're going. The previous board already determined where we're going, and if this board wants to make a change, I need to hear where we're going," Hirsman said.

Board President Terri Walker suggested tabling the issue until September, and Superintendent Tammy Prentiss said teachers could again present the rationale behind the new sequence.

"The previous board already determined where we're going, and if this board wants to make a change, I need to hear where we're going,"

— Kathleen Hirsman

Chris Covino, assistant superintendent of curriculum, said new curriculum would need to be developed even for the traditional courses. He expressed strong reluctance to further burden teachers.

"(The teachers) know what they're doing, and they have a designed a curriculum based on the Illinois Science Standards and the Next Generation Science Standards," Covino said. "There are no other standards that are used, no matter if we do BCP or PCB."

Additional time and funding also will be needed to write and align Biology of the Living Earth Honors and AP Physics 1 curriculums under the modified plan.

The board is expected to receive a presentation about the earth science standards at its Oct. 14 meeting and will discuss recommendations for the program of studies, including the science sequence, during its meeting on Oct. 28.

After amplified career, vocalist coaches others' voices

Singer Patricia Hurd had just returned to Chicago from a multi-year working tour of Europe in the late 1980s. She needed to earn some money before pursuing a new opportunity across the Atlantic.

Then Hurd got word auditions were being held for the runaway Broadway hit "Phantom of the Opera."

"It was like 'Hamilton' was the first year. You couldn't get tickets to save your life," Hurd remarked.

She gave it a shot.

"I went in literally 36 hours after I'd gotten back from Europe," Hurd recounted. "I wound up with the role of Carlotta, the opera's diva a and the second lead. It was just a whirlwind."

For the better part of the next decade she inhabited the part, logging more than 2,000 performances in Chicago and around the country.

"Boston, Detroit, Washington D.C. — I met two presidents and sang at The White House for the Clintons," Hurd said. "Singing at The Kennedy Center was a thrill."

She was brought in to join the Broadway company before the show ended its run.

"That was my one shot at being, like, a star," Hurd said of the experience.

Growing up in a music-loving household, Hurd said she aspired to be Barbara Streisand.

"There were a lot of talented musicians in the family, although nobody professional," she related.

Hurd gravitated toward classical music, attending Interlochen Center for the Arts summer camp in Michigan and earning a music degree from Northwestern. After graduating, she proceeded to take any vocal gig that came her way. "I did Lyric Opera Chorus and Chicago Symphony Chorus and Grant Park Chorus. Chicago's a big chorus town," Hurd said.

A big break came when operatic bass Jan-Hendrik Rootering, in town performing with the Lyric, connected Hurd with his New York agent. To boost her profile, the agent sent her to Europe.

"I made my debut at the Aldeburgh Festival in England in 'Don Giovanni'. It's a very prestigious festival, I was very lucky that I did that," she said.

By the end of her 'Phantom' run, Hurd was ready to put down roots. A friend's cat-sitting request near Hinsdale brought her here. An invitation to sing at Union Church led to an opportunity to teach a masterclass at Hinsdale Central.

"I found that I love the high school kids," she said.

Soon she was teaching at Central two to three times a week. Word spread and she gained students from other area schools. She stayed at Central for 20 years before deciding to give lessons out of her home studio.

"You get something out of teaching. It gives back to you," she said.

The pandemic required her to conduct virtual sessions, which Hurd noted is not ideal for operatic vocal instruction.

She enjoys seeing her pupils spread their melodious wings as she did.

"I think you have to be so dedicated, because it's a difficult life and it's difficult to succeed," Hurd said. "I just loved making music."

We must work together to emerge from COVID-19

July talk of returning to the classroom may seem premature — even cruel — for some.

But school administrators, as they have since March of 2020, are working to navigate COVID-19 waters that have suddenly turned choppy, reminding all of us that the pandemic is not over.

In just 10 days this month, the average test positivity rate in DuPage County more than doubled, increasing from 1.7 percent on July 14 to 3.7 percent on July 24.

While the availability of ICU beds remains relatively stable, the average number of patients in the hospital has been steadily increasing this month.

Meanwhile, even though only 58 percent of Illinois residents age 12 and older have been fully vaccinated, the number of people getting shots continues to drop each week. The seven-day average is less than 18,000 this week, down from a high of almost 133,000 reported in April.

The good news is far fewer people are dying each day from COVID-19. Almost 98 percent of deaths since Jan. 1 have been of people who had not been fully vaccinated.

Those in charge of providing safe spaces in which to educate our young people are processing all that data in developing in-person schooling plans. As we've learned, those safety measures can vary widely from community to community. Of course, changing guidance from health organizations don't help produce a straightforward approach.

On July 9, the Centers for Disease Control advised that masks should be worn indoors by those not fully vaccinated. Then just this past week, with the emergence of the Delta variant, that recommendation changed to universal indoor masking for all teachers, staff, students and visitors to K-12 schools, regardless of vaccination status.

At last week's Hinsdale High School District 86 Board meeting, Superintendent Tammy Prentiss, in announcing full-time in-person learning for everyone, stated that face coverings inside will be optional, but strongly encouraged for those unvaccinated.

Community Consolidated Elementary District 181 has yet to issue its return-to-school plan.

The mask issue has been a contentious, one especially in suburban districts, sparking picket lines and board meeting outbursts in opposition to mask mandates. While seeing neighboring districts follow different protocols can be confounding, we appreciate the local control that districts are afforded.

We also appreciate the public's understanding as officials make these decisions amidst a shifting pandemic landscape and respect for the fact that not everyone shares the same view.

No one, we surmise, wants to wear a mask. And the notion of being required to wear one flies in the face of our fiercely held prerogative of self-determination.

But public health emergencies call for steps that may impinge on individual comfort and preference. Registering one's opinion on the matter at board meeting is encouraged, but haranguing officials as they try to act for the greater good is not.

Let's treat each other as the neighbors we are, doing what's best for our own household while honoring others' choices rather than seeking to impose the particular behavior we endorse.

The involvement of children always raises the stakes. But it's also an opportunity to show kids how a community moves forward, diverse in opinions but united in concern for one another.

Simone teaches us what a champion can look like

What would people think of you if they judged you at your most difficult moment?

That's not a question I like to ponder. I've made plenty of mistakes and would like to believe they are tempered by the moments I did my best.

Four-time Olympic gold medalist Simone Biles received her share of hate after she decided Tuesday to withdraw from the team finals in order to focus on her mental health. A day later the 24-year-old also withdrew from the individual all-around competition in Tokyo.

But her critics have been silenced by her supporters, especially other athletes.

"We wholeheartedly support Simone's decision and applaud her bravery in prioritizing her well-being," a statement from USA Gymnastics read. "Her courage shows, yet again, why she is a role model for so many."

USA men's basketball team member Jayson Tatum spoke out in response to criticism from radio host Charlie Kirk.

"Is it that hard to be supportive and empathetic to what others are going through?" Tatum tweeted Tuesday night. "This is someone's daughter and her health your (sic) referring to. Wonder if he has kids and how he would feel as a parent, someone talking about his kids this way. Cause I'd be DAMNED. Simone is a hero!"

Dominique Moceanu, the youngest member of the U.S. Olympic team that won gold in Atlanta in 1996, tweeted a video of her falling on her head on the balance beam with a message of support for Biles.

"I was 14 y/o w/ a tibial stress fracture, left alone w/ no cervical spine exam after this fall. I competed in the Olympic floor final minutes later. @Simone_Biles 'white heart' decision demonstrates that we have a say in our own health — 'a say' I NEVER felt I had as an Olympian."

French professional soccer player Paul Pogba described her decision on Twitter as one of "undeniable strength."

"We always focus on the physical aspect of health but the mental aspect is just as important. When you take care of both, you will flourish in life," he tweeted.

Biles also received support from many in the medical community, including U.S. Surgeon General Dr. Vivek Murthy.

"Putting your mental health first is hard in normal circumstances," he tweeted. "Doing it when the eyes of the world are upon you takes extraordinary strength. Grateful to @Simone_Biles for demonstrating what strength looks like on and off the mat. Proud to have her represent our nation."

Politicians weighed in, too, from former first lady Michelle Obama to New York Congressman Mondaire Jones.

"Thank you, @Simone_Biles, for showing us what it looks like to truly take care of yourself and reminding us that mental health always comes first," Jones tweeted. "She's the greatest of all time and doesn't owe us a thing."

One of my favorite tweets is from @cameron_kasky.

"So inspired by Simone Biles. Winning gold medals is what athletes do. But inspiring people to fight for themselves against all odds is what champions do."

I remember Michael Jordan scoring 38 points in Game 5 of the 1997 NBA finals while he was suffering from the flu. He was described as a "clutch performer and relentless competitor." He, too, was the greatest of all time.

Even though Jordan could fly, he never was upside down in the air hoping to land on a four-inch piece of wood four feet off the ground.

Sometimes sticking it out is the right thing to do. Thanks, Simone, for reminding us that sometimes it's not.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Embracing a new chapter

When I last wrote an article for the paper, I had just finished my senior year of high school and was getting ready to begin a new chapter of my life at the University of Georgia.

Katie Hughes

My first year at school was filled with new friendships, lots of school work, fun nights out, a new sorority and many memories. Despite some COVID-19 setbacks, such as online classes and limited events, I am grateful to say that I was able to have a much more normal year than many other students. Although I wasn't heavily impacted by COVID obstacles, I still dealt with the usual ones that any college freshman experiences.

I worked hard to keep old friendships alive all while welcoming in new ones, and, for the first time, found myself dealing with real life problems. Problems that I had never had to deal with before, and ones that weren't just my own. People that I thought would always be in my life grew distant, and it took some time for me to accept that things were going to change for good. I wasn't the only person who was moving on. Being on my own and so far away from home, I found that I had to process a lot of these changes on my own, and the person I began to rely on most was myself.

I realized that what felt like a challenging and confusing time was really a time when my new life was coming together. My roommate became a new best friend, my sister and I grew closer than ever, and distance really did make the heart grow fonder. With time and distance, I learned to truly appreciate my family and hometown friends. With every morning coffee run with my roommate, every night out with my sorority sisters, and every walk to class in the Georgia heat with new friends, Georgia began to feel more like home. And I began to learn a valuable lesson.

We aren't meant to stay in the same place forever, and I think we know that. But what isn't always as clear is that we aren't supposed to stay the same people forever. We try to hold on to bits and pieces of our past selves or make failed efforts to keep in touch with people we can hardly relate to anymore, with the idea that if we let those things go, if we move on, we might lose ourselves.

But what I learned this year is that it is essential to let certain parts of our old lives go, in order to embrace our new ones.

For now, Georgia is my new life, and I am looking forward to what sophomore year has in store.

Dr. Jaroslav Fencel

Dr. Jaroslav Fencel, 85, peacefully passed at his Willowbrook home on July 21, 2021, with his wife and daughter at his side.

Dr. Fencel was a well-respected physician in the Downers Grove family practice that he started on his own in 1971. His personal integrity, empathy, compassion and love of medicine were obvious to those he cared for. His practice became highly regarded in the community and grew to include partners; together they were among the founding physicians of DuPage Medical Group. He was a member of the medical staff at Hinsdale Hospital and at Good Samaritan Hospital when it opened. He was a man of great character, proud of his family, and he enjoyed every day of his life.

Jerry was born in 1936 in Darova, Czechoslovakia, to Jaroslav Fencel and Ruzena Berankova. He received his doctor of medicine degree from Charles University in Prague. In 1957, he married his childhood sweetheart, Milena. In 1968 they, along with their daughter Milena, came with one suitcase to the United States to make a better life for their family. They made Willowbrook their home for 50 years.

Jerry enjoyed growing vegetables in his garden, playing tennis, riding his bike and most of all spending time with his grandchildren, Bobby and Vicky. His love of the mountains and of skiing brought him to Steamboat Springs,

Fencel

Colo., which became a special destination for the entire family. Jerry always had a great desire to see the world, and through his and Mili's extensive travels, they did, most recently on cruise ships. His lifetime wish to visit Easter Island was fulfilled. Besides their home, Jerry and Mili's most treasured place was at Sureshot Lake in Wisconsin. There, along with loving to fish, chop wood and cook on an open fire, Jerry found rest and solitude from his busy and demanding profession.

Dr. Fencel retired in 2004 and continued to enjoy life to its fullest. His legacy remains with the patients he served and with his family and friends who will always love and remember him.

He is survived by his wife of 64 years, Milena; his daughter, Milena (George) Kysela; his grandchildren, Robert (Tsveta) Kysela and Victoria (Kenneth) Mensch; his great-granddaughters, Brooklyn, Maya and Brielle; his sister, Vera Faitova; his niece, Ivana; and his nephew, Jaroslav.

Services are private.

Memorials may be made to Northwoods Wildlife Center, 8683 Blumenstein Rd. Minocqua, WI 54548 or online at <https://www.general@northwoodswildlifecenter.org>.

IT TAKES A VILLAGE

MARK PELKOWSKI, WATER & SEWER SUPERINTENDENT

When Mark Pelkowski began his career with the Hinsdale water and sewer department, he knew nothing about the village and not much more about water and sewer.

But 20 years later, there's not much Pelkowski doesn't know about the system that keeps water flowing in and out of Hinsdale's homes, businesses and public buildings.

Pelkowski is part of a five-member team charged with maintaining the village's water mains, storm sewers and sanitary sewers. The community pool also falls under Pelkowski's purview.

Along with responding to water main breaks and installing water meters, Pelkowski and the rest of the water and sewer staff keep a constant eye on the quality of water flowing into sinks, showers and washing machines all over Hinsdale.

"We do 21 bacteria samples a month," Pelkowski said of the current testing required by the environmental protection agency. "Every year, there are more."

In his two decades with the village, Pelkowski can't remember a time when residents were ordered to boil water before use — usually the result of a major main break or contamination of the water supply.

But water main breaks happen everywhere, and at all times of the year.

"There's no rhyme or reason," Pelkowski said, but whether they occur on a sunny afternoon or on a snowy Christmas Eve, the water and sewer department responds immediately to get it fixed. While they're not uncommon, Pelkowski said every water main break is different. Figuring out the right way to get things back up and running is one of the many things he likes about his job.

Problem solving is an everyday part of Pelkowski's job. When a resident calls with concerns about a high water bill or a problem with their meter, Pelkowski investigates the cause and starts searching for a solution.

"That's always gratifying in the end," he said.

Along with ingenuity, flexibility is a requirement of the job, Pelkowski said. He and the rest of the crew remain ready to respond to whatever might come up on any given day. Pelkowski said the job's unpredictability has helped to keep it interesting, even after 20 years.

"No two days are ever the same," he said.

Of course, not everything is an emergency. Keeping the water system in shape also involves proper maintenance, including replacement of some of the village's nearly century-old mains. Installed in 1923, the Chicago Avenue water main was recently replaced with a brand new line from the water plant on Symonds Avenue to Stough Street.

"That was a big job," Pelkowski said.

After graduating college with a degree in history, Pelkowski thought he would spend his working years in front of a classroom. Looking back, the now-married father of four said he is far better suited for a job that gets him outside.

"I enjoy the overall ambiance of Hinsdale," Pelkowski said.

July 30 will mark Pelkowski's 20th anniversary with the village. And while he said he's happy to be with the village after all these years, he's not one to celebrate such milestones. But he said he is grateful for the chance to work in Hinsdale, to serve its residents and to have a job he enjoys coming to every day.

It takes a Safety Village

Kids took to the streets of Safety Village again this summer following last year's hiatus because of COVID-19. The program is sponsored by the Katie Satkamp Memorial Foundation in memory of 7-year-old Katie, who lost her life following a fatal school bus accident. This year 188 campers attended the two-week camp, which is in its 39th year. Kids learn lessons about personal safety and the rules of the road and have the chance to drive miniature cars around a pint-sized village. The camp's goal is to teach real-life situations kids will remember if they are faced with an emergency in the future. (Jim Slonoff photos)

‘High School Musical Jr.’ in session

BAMtheatre preparing to put on the popular show for local audiences

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

“We’re all in this together!” cast members belt out in the catchy “High School Musical Jr.” theme song.

The lyric takes on new meaning in light of the last 18 months as Hinsdale’s BAMtheatre’s Youth Mainstage brings Disney Channel’s hit movie musical to life in the troupe’s return to in-person shows next weekend.

It’s the first day after winter break at East High. The Jocks, Brainiacs, Thespians and Skater Dudes all find their cliques. Basketball team captain and resident jock, Troy, discovers that the brainy Gabriella, a girl he met singing karaoke on his ski trip, has just enrolled at East High.

The couple cause an upheaval when they decide to audition for the high school musical. Although many students resent the threat posed to the “status quo,” Troy and Gabriella’s alliance might just open the door for others to shine as well.

Hinsdale’s Jocelyn Jeka, a rising freshman, plays Zeke, whom she describes as a basketball-loving but shy character who also loves to bake.

“It’s a really fun show, and everyone in the cast is just really nice and fun to hang out with,” said the BAMtheatre veteran.

Jeka acknowledged the up-tempo choreography has tested her skills.

“The dancing is hard to memorize, but it’s easier once you catch on to it,” she said.

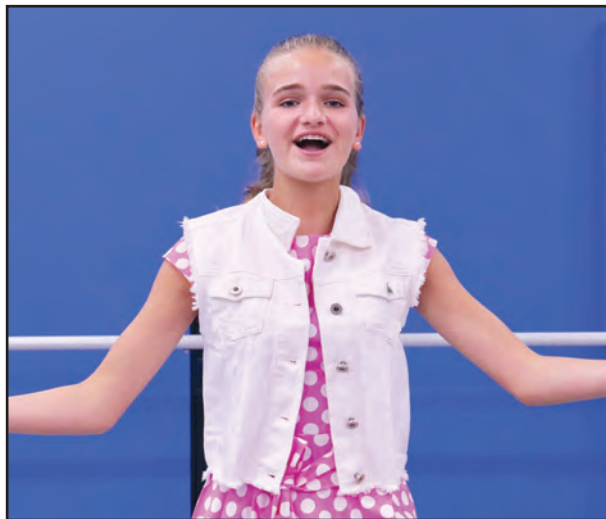

Gavin Schmitz, a Hinsdale seventh-grader, portrays Chad, a dedicated athlete who resists cross-pollination between student groups.

“I would say he’s sort of like a brain-dead jock,” Schmitz remarked, noting Chad undergoes an evolution in his thinking. “By the end of the movie, he understands that people should be able to do other things.”

Schmitz suggested he can relate to his character as he has a lot of friends into sports but not theater. Performing for others has always been in his DNA.

Cast members of BAMtheatre’s Youth Mainstage Production of “High School Musical Jr.” rehearse this week for the Aug. 5-7 production. Katelyn Kieninger of Hinsdale practices a scene as Sharpay, the school prima donna. Participants say the fun music and high-energy dancing is certain to engage audience members of all ages. (Jim Slonoff photos)

“I really like acting. I used to do little skits for my family,” he said, “I like entertaining people,”

Like Jeka, Schmitz said the choreography has taken him outside his comfort zone.

Eighth-grader Katelyn Kieninger of Hinsdale said she had to get up to speed on the routines after returning from family vacation. She plays Sharpay, who rarely misses a step.

“Sharpay is very much the drama queen. She’s kind of like the queen of the school, and she’s the president of the drama club,” Kieninger said. “Her main goal in the show is to make sure that she gets the lead in the musical.”

“She’s very driven in the show, which is fun for me because it’s something new for me, and I like playing new characters,” she added.

Performing again under normal conditions is wonderful, Jeka said.

“I’m just really glad to be doing it on stage again — not virtual — and without a mask,” she said.

Melanie Lamoureux, BAMtheatre’s founder and artistic director, said the pandemic has been both challenging and stimulating “We’ve survived, but it’s been a lot of work navigating all the curve balls,” she said. “It also allowed a lot of space to think creatively and to innovate in different kinds of ways.”

Kieninger said her experience with the program has been extremely positive.

“Everyone here is so nice, and the productions are amazing, and they make everyone feel so special,” she said. “No matter what part you have in the show, you really feel like you’re putting your work toward something.”

The show is directed by Claire Drews, with music direction by Peter Bromann and choreography by Laura Savage.

Performances are at 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Aug. 5 and 6, and 1 and 5 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 7, at Christian Church of Clarendon Hills, 5750 Holmes Ave. Tickets are $23 to $26 and available online at <https://www.bamtheatre.com>.

Kieninger encouraged people to check it out.

“I think they’ll love the energy and the excitement on stage,” she said. “Everyone’s kind of full-on energy for our first (post-COVID) time back.”

Students encouraged to dive right in

they go, the more they get in their head about what can go wrong."

His theory played out as one student attempted his first front dive off the high board during free time at the end of class.

"Oh my gosh, it's not that bad," the student said.

The biggest challenge of working with beginning divers is ensuring they avoid injuries, Bielobradek said.

"Because diving can be pretty dangerous, the most challenging thing is having kids try new dives correctly and safely," he said.

He begins by explaining the dive to the students on the deck and then having them try it off the side of the pool. He also breaks down the dive so students can practice a "lead up" first.

"A lead up is just a less complicated version of that dive, with one less rotation or one less twist," he said. "We mostly go off the 1-meter board, so the most dangerous thing that can happen is a child hitting their head off the board."

Gwyneth Catton, 7, of Hinsdale, who was learning how to do a front flip last week, said the dive isn't scary at all. But it is difficult.

"It's hard to rotate fully in the air," she said.

Bielobradek was much older than most of his students when he began diving his freshman year of high school in 2014.

"I progressed pretty quickly and I started diving for Windy City Diving Club in 2016," he said. "By junior, senior year I started getting recruited by colleges."

He ended up attending St. Bonaventure University in New York, where he will be a senior this fall.

Bielobradek discovered he also enjoys coaching young divers. A former high school classmate who now works for the village connected him with the open dive instructor position at the Hinsdale pool this summer. This probably will be his last summer working with kids, said Bielobradek, who will graduate next spring with a degree in finance and economics.

"My favorite part of coaching is watching the kids progress and learn new things," he said. "I get excited when a child learns a new dive."

After this week's classes, Bielobradek is heading back to New York for his final year of college, when his own diving career will come to an end.

"I'm going to miss that feeling of flying through the air and being up high, adrenaline, those kids of things," he said.

Bielobradek acknowledged that diving isn't for everyone.

"But kids that are fearless and have that kind of attitude that they want to do this and they feel like they're ready and they can visualize it in their head, those are the type of people I would encourage to try diving," he said.

Alexis Mitchell looks a little worried about completing the rotation on her front flip at a July 22 diving class.
