Garfield construction began Monday

Thoroughfare to be rebuilt in concrete in four sections, with work to finish in October

By Pamela Lannom

plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Summer road construction is underway in Hinsdale.

Garfield Avenue on Monday was closed between Fourth and Seventh streets as part of a $2.1 million project to rebuild the street between First and 55th streets in concrete.

The roadway will be rebuilt in four sections, said Al Diaz, assistant village engineer. The second phase will be just north of the first.

"We actually stipulated that the section of Garfield from First to Fourth streets should be addressed when the middle school is out of session," Diaz said.

The third phase will be from Seventh Street to 55th Street, and the final phase will be resurfacing Garfield from First Street to Chicago Avenue.

Depending on the length of the section, Garfield could be closed from four to seven weeks.

"There won't be any cross street access within the closed section because those intersections will be paved in concrete," Diaz said.

Access to Garfield off 55th Street also will be prohibited for the entire project to help limit the amount of through traffic in the construction zone, Diaz said.

The process involves digging up the existing roadway, installing forms, pouring the concrete and letting it cure, which can take up to a week.

Design work began last year, Diaz said.

"Typically we design things the year prior and then put it out to bid early in the season to take advantage of better pricing and to get any early start on the project, especially one this large," he said.

Crews try to begin work in May so the construction season can be finished up in mid-October.

"Come late October, it gets dicey as to when we can pave," Diaz said. "A lot of the materials we use have temperature constraints, even if it's asphalt or concrete. If it gets too cold, it takes longer to cure the material."

The project is being funded

Barricades block off Garfield from Fourth to Seventh streets as work begins on a project to rebuild the street, which will require the Fourth of July parade to be rerouted. The village also is resurfacing several streets as part of its summer master infrastructure plan work. (Jim Slonoff photo)

2022 resurfacing

The Hinsdale Village Board Tuesday awarded the 2022 resurfacing project to M&J Asphalt at a cost of about $720,00.

by $906,000 in federal Surface Transportation Program funds, $677,000 in REBUILD Illinois bond funds and $517,000 in motor fuel tax funds.

Residents can check construction progress on the village website at <https://www.villageofhinsdale.org>. Officials expect to post weekly updates on Thursdays or Fridays.

Diaz encouraged residents to be patient.

"The contractor is already showing signs of trying to expedite some of the work by having multiple crews and contractors on site," he said. "That shows us he's looking to try to get as much work done as fast as possible. They may end up finishing early, but with the weather, we never know."

Concrete streets typically have a life span of 40 years, Diaz said.

"We do have to do some maintenance. There will be some patching and some crack filling, but not much," he said. "There's more maintenance with the asphalt pavement."

The village also will resurface 10 streets and two parking lots this summer (see sidebar) at a cost of almost $720,000. The resurfacing budget was only $615,000, but the Garfield project came in $557,000 under budget, Trustee Neale Byrnes said at last week's Hinsdale Village Board meeting.

"So we're good to go with the entire project," Byrnes said.

Immanuel Hall was built from the soul

Former church remains part of village's faith lineage 122 years after it was constructed

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

In the late 19th-century, the west side of Hinsdale was home to an enclave of German immigrants. These faithful churchgoers would tread the village's wooden sidewalks to the north of Plank Road (today's Ogden Avenue) every Sunday to attend St. John Evangelical Church of Fullersburg.

In 1898, weary of the distance and at odds with the church's new pastor, several decided to establish their own congregation. They called upon Brookfield pastor Rev. Carl Luedeke to lead the new Deutsche Evangelisch Lutherische Immanuel's flock. But lead them from where?

"Rev. Luedeke was pushing vigorously the idea of building a church, which materialized in 1900," according to a history of Immanuel Evangelical Church contained in the church's 50th anniversary program from 1948. "(William) Vornsand was the contractor and all the carpenter work was done by members."

The corner of Grant and Third streets still displays their fruit of their labor, a simple yet enchanting Gothic-style frame structure known today as Immanuel Hall. Its days as a dedicated place of worship came to a close in 1964. When the property was listed in 1998 and demolition seemed imminent, the village, with the help of state grant money, purchased it and subsequently deeded the site to the Hinsdale Historical Society.

May is Historic Preservation Month, and Carrie Wester, president of the historical society, said holding on to these community treasures is vital.

"Not everyone is a historian, but I think it's important to keep this heritage," she said.

The church was built in eight weeks and cost just $3,000 thanks to the all-volunteer crew, according to archival records. One can picture worshipers a century ago stepping through the entrance on Grant, crossing the small foyer and receiving a spiritual lift from the 10 stunning stained glass windows flanking the sanctuary.

Pews on either side of a center aisle faced the altar. A staircase from the foyer leads up to a small balcony where the choir and organ were located, that is until both were repositioned at the front of the church.

Originally services were completely in German, and the church's back room was furnished with benches and desks for the youth.

"Here the Sunday School assembled, and the minister also held school every Saturday for several hours, to teach the children reading and writing high German and to supplement Sunday school lessons," the anniversary booklet recounts.

Many villagers at the turn of 20th century referred to Immanuel as "the pumpkin church" because of a distinctive bulb feature on its spire.

"The 'balloon' on the steeple reminded people of a pumpkin," said Sandy Williams, former historical society president.

In a sign of a growing fellowship and an increasing budget, the steeple was replaced in 1920, the same year the church was raised in order to dig a basement for fellowship functions.

"Church socials/gatherings would be held there," Williams said. "The raised portion on the east side runs all the way across the lower level and used to serve as a stage."

The basement is now home to the Roger and Ruth Anderson Architecture Center, a rich archival repository of the village's evolution structurally and otherwise.

A 402-pipe organ was installed in 1923, and the stained glass windows were put in the following year. A parsonage was erected in 1908 directly behind the church, on land which is now vacant.

"While the first floor of this parsonage was the minister's residence, with an additional bedroom upstairs, the rest of the second floor was left as one large room which was to be used for meetings and entertainments," the booklet reads.

In June of 1947, to finance a badly needed exterior paint job, member families were given little church-shaped piggy banks to save change.

By the following summer, the $2,124 collected was enough for the work.

Just prior to the historical society taking possession of Immanuel Hall in March 2001, it was listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Two years earlier it had been designated as Hinsdale's first historic landmark. The move to save the building became the impetus for other initiatives, like the passage of the village's historic preservation ordinance and formation of the historic preservation commission.

So while Immanuel Hall may no longer be a place sanctified solely for spiritual matters, it still enshrines the spirit of the community.

"Preservation is more than saving a building," Wester said. "It's also saving the stories of yesterday."

The church's sanctuary hosted countless life events such as baptisms and weddings, like this one from 1941. The church closed in 1964 and was purchased by the village and transferred to the Hinsdale Historical Society to be preserved as an event space.

Board opposed to 15 early release days

District 86 administrators asked to come back with plan that increases instructional time

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Fifteen early release Wednesdays for the 2022-23 school year would be too many, according to Hinsdale High School District 86 Board members, who asked instead to see a plan with no more than 12.

Administrators came to the board in March with a plan to have students released early almost every Wednesday, which was not well-received, and then cut that number to 15. The days would be used instead of late start days and some flex days to give teachers time to collaborate — especially across the district, said Chris Covino, assistant superintendent of academics.

Prior to the presentation, board member Jeff Waters expressed his opposition to the proposal and said he received “excessive” emails from residents who are against it. Many cited the loss of instructional time, especially following two years of a pandemic.

“I have yet to receive an email in support of it,” Waters said.

Covino said administrators don’t disagree with many of the community members’ concerns.

“What we plan here ... addresses so many of those issues because we are on the same page,” he said. “We believe in more instructional time. We believe in more supports for students who are struggling. Those two things are unquestioned and are part of this process.”

With 15 early release days, students would receive 1,003 hours of instructional time (up from 998 this year) and teachers would have 23 hours of collaborative time. Academic and social-emotional support services would be available for students between the 12:35 p.m. dismissal and the start of after-school sports or activities.

Waters said he would like to see students have 1,024 hours of instructional time, as they did prior to the pandemic. Since work on curriculum alignment began before the 2019-20 school year, instructional time has been 995 to 1,005 hours.

Hinsdale Central Principal Bill Walsh said administrators agree more instructional time is needed and are moving in that direction. But they have to work within the schedule dictated by construction projects. Classes for the 2022-23 school year can’t begin until Sept. 6.

Instructional time will increase again after next year, Covino said.

“Next year will be a move in that direction, not an end point,” he said.

The district would lose an estimated $45,000 in revenue from food sales during lunch on early release days. Students would have the option of buying grab-and-go items like sandwiches and yogurt, which would be available to students on the free lunch program.

“Food will be available for all students,” Walsh said.

Another challenge would be getting students who go home at 12:35 p.m. back to campus for afternoon and evening athletics and activities.

Several board members said coming out of a pandemic is a time to focus on instruction.

“Why not pause or slow the strategic plan for a year as a way to allow our students to get more classroom time, more instructional time and more time with their teachers, which is very valued?” Peggy James asked.

Covino said course teams must have time to meet.

“It’s not just about the strategic plan. That’s a big chunk of it. It’s about maintenance of their existing course,” he said, noting work on the strategic plan already has been pushed out two years.

A poll showed five board members would support a maximum of 12 early release days. That would increase instructional hours from 1,006 to 1,009 and reduce collaborative time from 23 to 18 hours.

Any change in collaborative time will have to be negotiated with the Hinsdale High School Teachers Association, whose contract calls for 30 hours of collaborative time each school year.

■ “I didn’t enjoy gardening. It was dirty, and I was a girl who didn’t like to get her hands dirty.” — Eleanor Nadbielny

Garden Study Club member helps sale grow

Keen to acclimatize to her new Golfview Hills surroundings after moving from Chicago, Eleanor Nadbielny signed up for a local garden tour.

“It seemed like almost all the ladies on the tour were from the Garden (Study) Club, and they didn’t know who I was,” related Nadbielny, who had unwittingly made herself a club recruitment target.

“I’ve been a member ever since,” she said.

That was 10 years ago, and for most of that time Nadbielny has held an officer’s post in the Hinsdale-based group, including terms as president and treasurer. She currently serves as co-chair of fundraising, which means she’s closely involved in the Garden Study Club’s annual plant sale coming up this Saturday, May 7, outside the Hinsdale History Museum (see Page 22 for details).

Last year during the pandemic, the sale relocated to the museum from its longstanding location in the Grant Square parking lot.

“It worked out very well — it could have been because we were still one of the few clubs having a plant sale,” Nadbielny said with a laugh.

The sale has a loyal following, she noted, thanks to reasonable prices and quality assurance, since the merchandise comes from members’ own planting beds.

“The plants are tested for this climate,” she stressed. “The ladies at the sale are all available to give advice and answer questions.”

Growing up in New Jersey, Nadbielny recalled her father always keeping a vegetable garden and her grandmother sweetening visits with a bowl of homegrown raspberries. But horticulture did not establish roots in Nadbielny’s heart as a youth.

“I didn’t enjoy gardening,” she said. “It was dirty, and I was a girl who didn’t like to get her hands dirty.”

Business school brought her to Chicago in 1981, and a career in the banking industry kept her here. Living in an urban high-rise stirred a desire to be closer to nature. When she married, she and her husband agreed to return to his home turf west of the city where they could enjoy a greener landscape. Having little need for typical newlyweds’ registry items, the couple instead requested garden center gift certificates.

ELEANOR NADBIELNY

NATIVE OF NEW JERSEY • RETIRED FROM A BANKING CAREER • IS MARRIED TO JIM • SPENT THREE YEARS IN LONDON • SELLS GARDEN ART FLOWERS AT CRAFT SHOWS

“I was able to get a flowering crabapple, which blooms right around the time of our anniversary in early May.

She especially looks forward to her Sweet Autumn Clematis after most of summer’s blossoms have faded.

“It looks like a snowdrift. It’s just like a whole white blanket of flowers come late August or September,” Nadbielny said. “I try to have stuff that birds and bees like, too.”

She also makes decorative garden art flowers out of recycled materials, which adorn her yard.

“My husband has a limit on how many we can have in our yard,” she quipped.

She’ll be happy to talk to visitors about her creations at the plant sale, proceeds from which support the club’s community beautification efforts, like planting trees along the BNSF railway and maintaining the history museum’s garden.

“We hope to sell all the plants,” Nadbielny said.

Preserving the past can pay future dividends

May is National Preservation Month, and, in so many ways, Hinsdale is a veritable exhibit of how retaining historic architecture — whether residential, commercial or public in nature — can enrich a town's character and enhance its livability.

We have taken the opportunity over the years to bring our readers inside many of these vintage treasures, sharing stories of the people and/or events that brought them into existence and how their caretakers today maintain their essence while still equipping them with the amenities required for modern living and convenience.

This May is no exception as we kick off our monthlong Hinsdale Legacies series with a story on Immanuel Hall (see Page 5). The 122-year-old former church building rose from the corner of Grant and Third streets as the proud home of the faith community made up primarily of German immigrants who had settled in town.

More than three decades after last serving as a place of worship and slated for demolition, the village in 1999 stepped in to purchase it with the help of grant funding. It was later deeded to the Hinsdale Historical Society, and it became a catalyst for more preservation efforts following a decade that saw so many historic homes in town razed to make way for new development.

Immanuel Hall was listed on the National Register of Historic Places, a distinction it shares with Hinsdale's downtown area, the Robbins Subdivision in the village's southeast section and four local homes: 142 E. First St., 329 E. Sixth St., 8 E. Third St. and 318 S. Garfield Ave.

Established in 1973 by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, National Preservation Month is co-sponsored by local preservation groups, state historical societies, and business and civic organizations across the country with the aim of promoting historic places for the purpose of instilling national and community pride, promoting heritage tourism, and showing the social and economic benefits of historic preservation.

Notable properties have continued to be lost to new construction, prompting village officials over the last year to explore ways to codify preservation promotion. Those deliberations have resulted in considerable momentum behind the creation of an Historic Overlay District. Homes identified as historically significant within the district would be eligible for voluntary preservation incentives, including rebates of the village portion of property taxes for five years with a minimum homeowner investment of $50,000 on eligible exterior improvements, relaxed bulk zoning regulations to enable modernization work on a historic home, and matching grants for 50 percent of eligible projects up to $10,000.

Village attorney Michael Marrs, who helped craft the overlay district ordinance, spoke to motivation behind the measure.

"The idea is to take these historically significant properties in the village, identify them, put them on a list, which will then make them eligible for certain preservation incentives and hopefully incentivize the rehabilitation to extend their lives for generations going forward," he said.

One doesn't need to be a history buff to recognize the value and charm that historic preservation confers on the village. So take note this month of the local legacies that bring you pride.

Lessons I hope to teach Ainsley

Around Mother's Day, it seems reporters like to ask folks about the most important things they learned from their mothers.

One day, maybe such a question will be posed to an adult Ainsley. And here's what I hope she has to say.

Read as much as you can.

I will be delighted if Ainsley loves Shakespeare and Jane Austen. But I also hope she does a better job than I did of reading different authors in varied genres and discovering wonderful new voices and the amazing stories they have to tell.

Travel.

Even though Ainsley was the very last person in her preschool class to get on a plane, I am confident that will not interfere with her appreciation of travel. We hope to balance the influence of one set of grandparents, who took a family vacation tracing Mozart's life through Europe, with the other, who liked vacationing in places with rides.

Say yes to the tasting menu.

Lupa in Greenwich Village. Topolobampo in Chicago. Two of the best meals I've had in my life were tasting menus. Forget ordering your favorites. Put your fate in the chef's hands and eat like you've never eaten before.

Try new things.

A common thread that emerges here is the notion of getting out of your comfort zone. I think that practice should be applied to all areas of life.

Be a human being, not a human doing.

Life can be an exhausting mix of doing the things you need to do (work, laundry, dishes) and things you want to do (reading, eating out, traveling). Sometimes, though, you need to pause and just be. In that quiet space, you just might be able to hear what your heart is telling you.

Pamela Lannom

Shake it off.

Ainsley's current favorite Taylor Swift song is growing on me. Even if I didn't like the tune, the message is a good one. Constructive criticism offered with love can be a wonderful way to gain perspective. Unfortunately, not all critics are motivated by love. The haters are going to hate, and sometimes all you can do is shake it off.

Be comfortable in your faith.

Ainsley's kindergarten teacher mentioned during a conference this year that Ainsley talks about God a lot. That made me a little nervous, seeing as she's now in public school. Then I shared the story with a pastor in town and he said, "Good for her!" I realized he's right. I hope she keeps talking about God for the rest of her life.

Find good friends.

As an only child myself, I understand Ainsley's desire to have a sibling. I also am fortunate to have learned that you can love someone like a sister without sharing a mother.

Be kind.

It is easy to be kind to people you love. Being kind to people who make you feel afraid or inferior is so difficult. When I'm able to respond to those types with kindness, I never regret it.

Remember that where your treasure is, that is where your heart is.

That sounds like one of those quotes you hear during a church stewardship campaign — and that's probably where I heard it the first time. But it has stuck with me, and the more I think about it, the more I realize how true it is. Your time, your talents, your money — how you spend those indicates what is important to you, like it or not.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Preserve your precious resource

Time is on your side. Don't waste it.

If you know anything about me, you know I absolutely despise waste. Wasted money, wasted energy and perhaps worst of all, wasted time. I have zero tolerance for it. Our society today wastes way too much time worrying about, talking about and arguing about things that are completely out of our control.

Take the weather, for instance. How horrible has our spring been so far? I don't know anyone who hasn't expressed their dismay about the lack of warmth and sunshine. I am as guilty as anyone. Well, I have bad news for all of us. Exhaustive scientific research has confirmed that complaining about the weather does nothing to change it. And yet, we can't help ourselves.

In my house, objecting about what to watch on TV is akin to whispering at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. I can whine. I can whimper. Yes, I can even expostulate. But that won't change the fact that I'm gonna watch reruns of "Law and Order" whether I like it or not.

With all due respect to the golfers out there, I can't think of a better waste of my time than spending four plus hours swinging my way around a perfectly fine patch of grass.

I love being outdoors and hanging with my friends. But given the amount of destruction I usually leave behind, I'm pretty sure the owners of the course would be just fine if I spent my time elsewhere. Have a nice time boys. I'll meet you at the 19th hole.

But in today's world, I don't think there's any more pertinent example than, dare I say, lamenting about politics. You can't spend more than 30 seconds on social media without reading about someone's objection to Senator A or Congressman B. No matter what the issue or what side of the aisle, we just can't help ourselves. And has it changed anything? Do you really think you've swayed anyone's opinion with your rantings?

Here's a novel idea. Instead of complaining, why don't you come up with some concrete ideas to solve whatever the problem of the day is? I bet more people would listen, including your local representative. Although you'd better be careful. If your idea is too good, you might be encouraged to run for office.

My point is, there are much better ways to spend our time. Take a nap. Call a friend. Contemplate your naval. They're all better and more productive than belly-aching your way through life.

And if these options aren't your cup of tea, just take a break from it all and go for a walk. That is, if our weather ever gets better.

Longtime residents support Hart, Galassi in county races

We have lived in Hinsdale for most of our lives. We built our business here, raised our children here and now are overjoyed to see our kids raising our grandchildren here. We have also engaged civically over the years — whether that be through chairing the Historic Preservation Commission or founding the Hinsdale Kitchen Walk.

Hinsdale is a community we love — and it is our mission to support people who love this community as much as we do. That is why we are supporting Greg Hart for DuPage County Board chairman and his running mate, Kari Galassi, for county board member.

Greg Hart grew up in Burr Ridge, attended Saint Isaacs, went on to earn his MBA from the University of Chicago, built a successful consulting practice and came back to Hinsdale with his wife to raise his two young children. Greg represented us admirably for four years on the DuPage County Board, winning national recognition for his efforts to combat the opioid epidemic. He will make an excellent chief executive for DuPage County.

Kari Galassi is a skilled CPA, executive recruiter, wife and mother of three. She led the successful Yes for D86 referendum and will match that positive impact representing District 3 on the county board. For Hinsdale to continue to be a destination community, we need to make sure Hinsdaleans have a seat at the table. Let's give our community the voice it deserves by electing the Hart-Galassi ticket on June 28. — John & Penny Bohnen

IBLP site on Ogden could be solution for two problems

Could there be a simple solution to two problems, one facing District 181 and the other the village Of Hinsdale? Unacceptable proposals for the long vacant land at the intersection of Ogden and Adams, owned by IBLP (Institute of Basic Life Principles) have once again been withdrawn by Ryan Co., leaving the possibility of dividing that property and satisfying two needs at once.

1) The NW corner of the Ogden/Adams Intersection includes 7.5 acres with an already existing building on a parcel zoned IB (institutional building) that would seem ideal for District 181's administration building, being located midway between Hinsdale and Clarendon Hills.

2) The NE corner, consisting of a spacious hilltop overlooking extensive wetlands, could be dedicated by the village as parkland, avoiding the previous proposals' serious threats of a gigantic commercial facility that would cause massive traffic problems on Ogden, increase flooding, and overload the existing capacities of AdventHealth Hospital, Hinsdale Fire Department and Hinsdale Police Department. It would be Hinsdale's only park north of Ogden.

Importantly, by providing a suitably welcoming entrance to the village we would also be maintaining Hinsdale's distinctive and beautiful character. — Marti and Armando Travelli, Hinsdale

Ron opened Expressway Auto Parts with a partner in the mid-1960s overlooking the Dan Ryan Expressway and eventually took over the business as a sole practitioner and grew it to six stores throughout Chicago's south and east sides. Ron was a longtime member of the East Side Lions Club and the Jaycees.

Although Ron loved living close to his roots, he also enjoyed traveling and never missed an opportunity to visit somewhere new or much-loved throughout the US and abroad. A generous man, one of his many catchphrases was "Anything I can do for you?" and his friends and family knew he really meant it.

Ron met Barbara A. Hill in 1955 and the pair married in 1957, eventually celebrating 60 years of marriage before her death in 2018.

ASK AN EXPERT

SUSAN MEYER, ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHER

What is teaching first grade like?

First grade is a time of immense learning and growth for most children — a fact that has been both the greatest joy and the biggest challenge of the job Susan Meyer has enjoyed for nearly 30 years.

When children enter Meyer's first-grade classroom at Oak School for the first time, they're basically kindergartners, Meyer said. But when they leave the following June, they are readers ready to tackle second grade. Readjusting to a fresh group of hungry learners each August is always a bit difficult, Meyer said, but like her students, she enters each school year with excitement for the learning she knows is ahead.

"First grade is when the children learn to read, and I love seeing that spark in their eye," said Meyer, who welcomed her last group of new students last fall. After 28 years at Oak School, she will spend her final day in the classroom June 3.

Meyer said she can't recall a time when she didn't want to be a teacher.

"I remember always playing school in the basement with my brothers and sister," she said.

She spent a few years teaching in the northern suburbs before learning of a need in Hinsdale. The village experienced an enrollment boom in the mid-1990s and teachers were in demand, Meyer said. She quickly fell in love with her job, the school and the community.

"Oak School has been wonderful," she said.

Meyer said the first 20 minutes of every school day are her favorite. That's when she hears stories of lost teeth, news of new siblings on the way and the pride in a student's voice after earning a yellow belt in taekwondo.

"They want to engage with you and tell what's going on in their lives," she said.

Her students' stories are always entertaining, if not entirely true. First-graders have vivid imaginations, and Meyer said she's learned to believe about half of what she hears.

"I tell the parents, 'I will believe half of the stories I hear about home if you believe half of the stories you hear about what goes on here,'" Meyer said.

The goal throughout the school year is for students to tell those stories in writing. By the end of the school year, most can write several sentences about a single subject, Meyer said.

When Meyer started teaching, computers didn't play a part in the first-grade classroom. Now, every child has their own iPad. Meyer said increased screen time has resulted in the need for more social direction. She creates opportunities for students to work in pairs, which encourages them to develop conversation skills while also learning reading, writing and arithmetic.

The job of a first-grade teacher is a physical one, Meyer said. Along with constantly bending or squatting to put herself at a child's eye level, she logs about 8,000 steps during an average day in the classroom.

"I never sit at my desk. You're always moving," she said.

Meyer said she's looking forward to getting her daily steps in slightly more scenic places, including the nation's national parks. But first, she will take some time to simply relax.

"Now, it's time for me," she said.

D181 welcomes new principals, bids retirees farewell

Community Consolidated Elementary District 181 will welcome two new principals this summer.

The board agreed at its meeting Monday to hire Cory Burke as the new Hinsdale Middle School principal and Effey Nassis as the new Oak School principal, effective July 1.

Burke has experience at the middle school and elementary levels, serving eight years as an assistant principal in Schaumburg District 54.

"Ms. Burke brings many strengths to Hinsdale Middle School and our leadership team," said Superintendent Hector Garcia. "We were very impressed by her leadership experience, academic skill set and the ability to build strong relationships with students, parents and staff."

Burke said she is humbled and honored to serve as the next HMS principal.

"I am eager to start the partnership with the community and district and look forward to the continued success of an already high achieving community," she said.

She received a bachelor's degree from Northern Illinois University earned her master's in educational leadership there as well.

Nassis is currently the assistant principal of Scott Elementary School in Naperville District 203.

"Throughout the search, stakeholders and administrators were impressed by Ms. Nassis' commitment to students and to student learning, insight into best practice and focus on both teacher and student growth," Garcia said. "She has a history of fostering a collaborative culture in schools, empowering others and fostering high quality relationships with students, staff members and parents."

Nassis said she's honored and excited to join the D181 community.

"I will continuously strive to advocate for the students, staff and community members in order to build upon the tremendous success that has already been achieved at Oak School," she said.

She has a bachelor's in elementary education from Elmhurst College and two master's degrees from Olivet Nazarene University, one in reading education and the other in school improvement leadership. She has presented at state and national conferences on best practices and was a recipient of a Those Who Excel award from the Illinois State Board of Education for her work.

The search process involved parents, faculty and administrators. Parents and staff/faculty were surveyed about the qualities they wanted in a new leader and a small group of teachers, parents and administrators interviewed candidates.

Each received a one-year contract. Burke will earn $116,664 a year; Nassis will earn $111,709.

Current HMS principal Ruben Pena came to the district as assistant principal at HMS in August 2006. He was promoted to principal the following summer. He is moving to Clarendon Hills Middle School, where he will join the student services team as a social worker.

Martha Henrikson has served as the Oak School principal since 2014. She joined the district in 2007 as assistant principal at Hinsdale Middle School.

Henrikson was among the 19 retirees honored at the school board meeting. Other District 181 retirees are

Walking for Wellness

More than $615,000 was raised Sunday for the Walk for Wellness House annual 3k walk/5K run. Hinsdalean and WGN news anchor Ben Bradley was the starter for the race. Maggi Gee participated in the 10-step walk with her grandchildren, Louise and Packy Terlep. She was walking in memory of her late husband Tone. Reggie Cribbs sang "Home" before the walk/run began. Dig in to Restaurant Week

The annual event highlighting Hinsdale's dining destinations returns next week

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Your table awaits!

Hinsdale Restaurant Week kicks off Friday, May 13, running through Sunday, May 22, and the village's eateries are readying to give diners gastronomic experiences they can only enjoy here.

The annual event, sponsored by the village and its economic development commission, is an opportunity to let Hinsdale residents and those in the surrounding area experience what the town is serving up.

"The restaurant scene in Hinsdale continues to thrive", said Kathleen Gargano, Hinsdale's village manager. "The customer base for our restaurants extends beyond Hinsdale borders as word continues to spread of the wonderful food options available."

Customers can enjoy a specially prepared menu, discounts on food, or sometimes both. Village newcomer Sauced Pizzeria, which last year took over Baldinelli's at 114 S. Washington St., is offering a pair of $45 dinner-for-two multi-course selections, one with a build-your-own pasta entrée and the other featuring a two-topping pizza. Just make sure to save room for dessert.

"Either the cheesecake or the tiramisu — and the cheesecake is homemade," owner Greg White related.

White is hoping Restaurant Week will help spread the word that his establishment offers more than delivery and carry-out service.

"We are a dine-in place, and we have some good options for (diners) for both food and for beverages," White said, highlighting the well-stocked bar.

Officials are delighted that 13 restaurants are participating this year, the most ever. Restaurant Week was previously held in March. But when the pandemic comelled the shift to outdoor dining, it was moved to the more al fresco-friendly May, which clearly seems popular with eateries and diners.

The village has recently taken steps to support outdoor dining by modifying its regulations around the practice to help restaurants design their areas, and investing in more attractive barriers to separate the eating areas from traffic.

"Based on the positive feedback from our residents, outdoor dining will again be offered," Gargano said. "The plan will allow our community to enjoy the outdoors while dining in an aesthetically pleasing environment."

And the offerings are not limited to dinner service, with several breakfast and lunch spots catering to the daytime appetite. Garden Berry Café in Gateway Square, another newer arrival opened last year by couple Selene Padilla and José Jasso, will take 15 percent off customers' bills during the week. Padilla said she was alerted to Restaurant Week by her loyal clientele.

"A lot of our customers are the ones that actually are letting us know and keeping us informed," Padilla said. "We want to let people know that we're here and give them special discounts, as long as they come and give it a try. Hopefully they like it and they keep on coming back."

There are no passes to buy, coupons to carry or cards to punch. Reservations are highly recommended — and be sure to mention "Restaurant Week."

"I look forward to the restaurants being able to showcase their food offerings," Gargano said.

Of course the hope is that those in the know about the diverse culinary landscape in town will introduce it to family or friends through the event.

Hinsdale restaurants are eager to plate meals for diners during the village's Restaurant Week May 13-22.

Among the participants are Sauced, serving multi-course pasta and pizza dinners for two (top), and Garden Berry Market, where people can stop in for its popular crepes and omelettes from a menu that will be discounted 15 percent for the event. (Jim Slonoff photos)

Just because they can doesn't mean they do

Understanding of adolescent decision making has moved beyond simple “age differences in risk perception and reasoning” to include relevant social and emotional factors that directly inform when and how adolescents make decisions about everything from substance use to condom use.

Adolescence is defined as the period between which “physiologically normal puberty” initiates and adulthood begins. Though adulthood is often culturally defined in legal terms, the World Health Organization defines adolescence as that time in human development characterized by “rapid physical, cognitive and psychosocial growth,” typically occurring between 10 and 19 years of age. Though most adolescents are considered medically “healthy,” negative outcomes associated with unhealthy risky behavior is the leading cause of death amongst this demographic.

Adolescents in fact possess the same cognitive abilities to evaluate risky behaviors as do adults. However, their ability to competently evaluate risky behavior and make decisions in their best interest is directly dependent upon the presence of “neutral circumstances,” i.e., removed of stress, peer pressure and the potential for dopamine gain. In other words, “just because they can doesn't mean they do” make the right decisions is in large part due to numerous influence factors.

Adolescents are more likely to engage in certain risky behaviors — drive at excessive speeds, try marijuana and alcohol, etc. — when accompanied by others their age than when alone. Being friends with others who engage in risky behavior involving substance use directly predicts an adolescent's subsequent decision making.

Adolescents do not necessarily believe themselves to be invulnerable to harm but rather tend to seek experiences that provide a high dopamine or “feel good” gain. It's not that they think they are invincible, but rather the reward is “worth it” in the moment. Experiences deemed “positive” and offering high emotional gains do affect subsequent decision making. They are therefore more likely to engage in risky behavior that makes them feel good than they are to avoid risky behavior with a negative outcome.

Adverse Childhood Experiences

Helen Baker

include physical and emotional neglect, sexual abuse, violence, parental incarceration, household substance use, etc. put adolescents at greater risk of “impaired self-regulation” due to the negative effects of trauma on cognitive and social-emotional development.

Parent communication and parenting styles affect adolescent decision making. Secure attachments to primary care-givers (particularly mothers), as well as well-informed families and peer groups, all help adolescents develop healthy relationships with others and a subsequent decline in risky behavior.

As parents and teachers of adolescents, how can you help?

The more informed parents and caregivers are about how adolescents are making decisions, as well as what motivators influence them, the more effective is their ability to help them make decisions that have positive effects on their health.

Healthy risk taking must be encouraged during adolescence. From physical, emotional, social, intellectual and spiritual, adolescents need to the opportunities to make “low-stakes” decisions for themselves. Not all risk taking is negative and “healthy risk taking” is a normal part of adolescent development. Examples could include:

- physical — participating in a team sport, trying a new food
- emotional — reaching out for help, apologizing for a mistake
- social — public speaking, asking someone out on a date
- intellectual — enrolling in a challenging course, applying knowledge to a new situation
- spiritual — experimenting with different values systems and identities, volunteering for a good cause

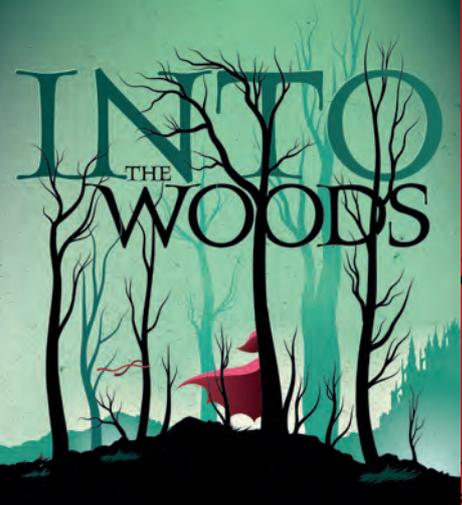

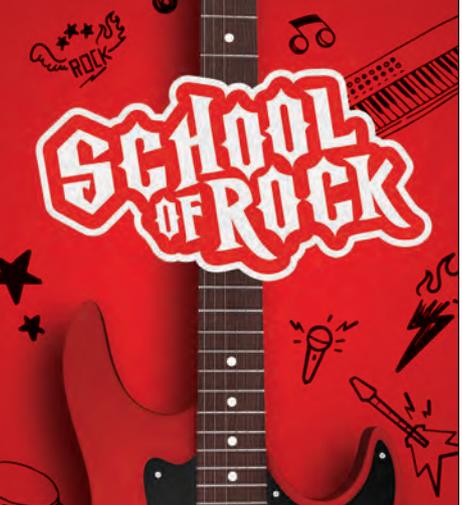

While there have always been a myriad of reasons contributing to an adolescent's decision-making process, we now find ourselves with more data and information to better navigate the elusive mind of an adolescent. We can develop better programs and have better conversations to help ensure we're reinforcing healthy practices and. We can provide them with impactful information so they “do make the right decision” vs. “can make the right decision.”

Wind, rain, sun, buses and a ship — along with a dinosaur or two — made it a great evening to be a Red Devil at prom

Minutes before students were about to gather for prom, sirens signaling a tornado warning went off, forcing organizers into the hallways at Hinsdale Central. Then the skies opened up with a heavy downpour. A few minutes later, the sun broke through the clouds and the 670 prom-goers began to gather at the school. With construction and COVID-19 concerns, organizers opted out of the annual red carpet gathering before students boarded buses to head down to the Field Museum. Post prom was held onboard the Odyssey. Sami Raslan, Haley Casey and Cece Lynch arrive at Central. Tom Skokna works with his group on a game of hangman while waiting for departure. Ellie Andrzejewski and Kate Ferren prepare to board. Zoe Limparis gets a hand from Aidan Dufort. HOROSCOPES

May 2022 Horoscopes • Week 2

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
Try to avoid any impulsive spending for the next several days, Capricorn. The temptation will be high, so this will be a bit of a challenge for you. Stick to the essentials.

ARIES – Mar 21/Apr 20
Avoid going down the rabbit hole that can be social media, Aries. Put your phone or tablet to the side for a little bit and focus your attention elsewhere.

CANCER – Jun 22/Jul 22
Be mindful of whom you confide in this week, Cancer. Not everyone has your best interests at heart and may use the information you share to his or her advantage instead of yours.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
Libra, your ego may take a temporary hit as someone in your sphere gets a promotion or a recognition before you. Don't take this to heart as it is only time before you get to shine.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
Aquarius, stay calm and keep your nose to the grindstone during a potentially hectic week. This may mean taking a day off or at least a step back.

TAURUS – Apr 21/May 21
Try to stay calm and grounded right now, Taurus. Others can learn from your example at work, as you likely will be the voice of reason among your colleagues.

LEO – Jul 23/Aug 23
A partner or close friend may seem to pull away from you this week, Leo. Don't take it personally as it won't be a permanent break. Soon things will be back to normal.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
Try not to trigger any people in your home who seem to be more tense than usual, Scorpio. It may be tricky, but keep the calm and maintain the status quo for now.

PISCES – Feb 19/Mar 20
Some truths are difficult to hear and swallow, Pisces. Only through learning all sides of the story can you grow as a person.

GEMINI – May 22/Jun 21
Gemini, if you are having trouble figuring out a path this week, try to meditate on a solution. Find a quiet spot and visualize your goals and how you can achieve them.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
Sticking to your normal routine this week simply will not be possible, Virgo. Start brainstorming ways you can get things done more quickly.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
Well-meaning advice can backfire if it is offered unsolicited, Sagittarius. Unless someone comes to you seeking help, it's best to stay silent for now.

Former teammates ready to play more ball has given him anything.”

Despite their talent, the boys kept their egos in check, Smith said.

“None of these kids ever got a big head and they were always good teammates,” he said.

Ben’s dad, David Oosterbaan, pointed to the positive examples set by everyone associated with the team.

“Coach Jim and Coach Pat taught the boys to compete with class and carry themselves as gentlemen on and off the field,” he said. “Ben had two great role models in them, and the other boys on their team and their parents were a major part of their success.”

Donovan’s sons served as inspiration to the younger players as well. David Oosterbaan said he and Ben went to California in 2019 to watch Joe Donovan play as the starting catcher for the Michigan Wolverines.

“Ben’s experience at those games, being with coach Jim and watching Joe compete, created in him even more love for the game and more drive to play baseball in college,” David Oosterbaan said.

Donovan said Joe and his older brother, Charlie, had the same chance to rub elbows with older players who served as inspiration. Joe is now a catcher in the Cleveland Guardians organization, trying to make it to the big leagues.

“It has the potential to really light the fire in a player who has some aptitude and some desire to do it,” Donovan said. “It’s a really cool process. I feel so grateful that not only did my boys have that sort of relationship with my students, but that these younger students had an opportunity to do that with my boys. It was one of the most enjoyable parts of the process for me.”

And when Charlie died in 2015, the fall after graduating from high school, his teammates were there for the Donovan family.

“Ben Oosterbaan and Lucas Smith and some of these guys were on a team that Charlie, Joe and I spent a lot of time working with out of Hinsdale. They were a big part of putting up ribbons on trees,”

Donovan said, recalling the special moment when he spotted them on his street.

He believes the positive environment and decision to always treat the boys with dignity, even after a loss, created a level of trust.

“You’re able to create a bond that is lasting and meaningful,” he said.

Pat Hughes said he is grateful to have had the opportunity to work with great friends coaching a group of boys who were great friends.

“It’s been a labor of love for us,” he said.

And he appreciates the chance to see them grow in their baseball careers.

“It’s wonderful to be able to have even a tiny role, a small role, in a young person’s development,” he said. “It’s a gift. It’s a blessing.”

And it’s a gift that will keep on giving.

“My wife and I have already planned to be at as many baseball series and road trips as Luke will allow us, which we think will be all of them, which is pretty phenomenal,” Dan Adams said.

Memories to last a lifetime

It’s unanimous.

When these five friends are playing college ball and think back to their days on Pat Hughes’ travel team, one memory will stand out — traveling to Cooperstown to play some of the best teams in the country. Hughes was able to take two of his teams there during the four years he coached.

Here’s what he, other coaches and the players had to say about it:

“It’s a magical experience that a lot of kids around here have gotten to do. Being there and having the families there and my wife there and all the moms, it was a wonderful time.” — Pat Hughes

“Our little team from Hinsdale and the surrounding area getting to the final eight at that Cooperstown tournament was something that we didn’t expect but something we will never forget for sure.” — Jim Smith

“Getting to see a whole bunch of the country with just four guys and a smelly minivan was a pretty special way to spend a week.” — Dan Adams on he and his son carpooling with Pat and John Hughes

“The kids we played against definitely were not 12 years old and they slaughtered us in the fourth inning.” — Luke Adams on one 2 a.m. game against a team from Florida

“I remember how excited we were because we didn’t think we’d go that far. There were 114 teams there. To win that game was surreal.” — Cooper Malamazian on winning the game to get into the final eight

“That was a great trip — just the camaraderie, just being with them for a week straight in the bunks was fun.” — Lucas Smith

“We beat a lot of teams that we weren’t supposed to beat. We kept getting to stay longer and longer because we were winning.” — Ben Oosterbaan

“Cooperstown was just amazing. Being with all your friends and being able to make it that far and get top eight in the tournament. It was something I’ll never forget.” — John Hughes

KRAMER DRAFTED BY CHICAGO BEARS

Hinsdale’s Doug Kramer was selected by the Chicago Bears in the sixth round (No. 207 overall) of the NFL draft on Saturday. The five-year starting center for the University of Illinois earned

All-Big Ten honors in each of his last three seasons. He was an All-Big Ten second team selection by the conferences coaches in 2021 after being an All-Big Ten honorable mention honoree in 2020 and 2019.

The 6-2, 305-pounder was a three-time captain for Illinois and excelled in the classroom. He was the No. 7 ranked interior offensive lineman returning to college football in 2021 and listed as the No. 7 NFL draft center prospect in the nation by Mel Kiper.

Kramer graduated from Hinsdale Central in 2016, where he was an offensive lineman for the Red Devils.

Read the story on Kramer in the sports section in the May 12 issue.

TENNIS TEAM HOLDS FUNDRAISER

The Hinsdale Central varsity

boys tennis team held a Red/White Scrimmage Fundraiser for Bridge Communities, a nonprofit that supports the homeless as they transition to living in homes.

Team captains Noah Hernandez and Mujtaba Ali-Khan led their squads as the team raised more than $3,500.

SPORTS — ROUNDUP

STUDENT ATHLETE PROFILE

Name: Matt Hughes
Year: senior
Hometown: Hinsdale

What's your earliest memory of playing volleyball?

I started playing volleyball in seventh grade at CHMS. It was a lot of fun.

What do you love about the sport?

Mostly I've had really good teammates throughout all of my years of playing. It was pretty easy to pick up, but I've been working on my game ever since.

How have you evolved as a player since freshman year?

Freshman year I changed from middle to setter, and the coaches have been great helping me transition. I feel that I've grown as a leader and in trying to get my teammates energized.

What's the key to making assists?

Just trust that your teammates are going to be there. You've got to know where they're going to be, and then try to put it in the right spot for them.

How would your teammates describe you?

They'd probably call me pretty quiet. I'm not that loud, but I think they respect me.

Any pregame rituals?

I do setting drills off the wall before each game. I don't feel right if I don't do it before I play.

Have you been in other Central activities?

I played basketball three years, and I'm a member of the marching band and National Honor Society.

Siblings?

My little brother is the backup setter on the team. I also have an older brother and older sister.

Any secret talents?

I'm pretty good at chess. In third grade I got ninth place at nationals in my division. I don't think a lot of people know that.

Where to next?

Indiana University to study business.

Why does coach Tom Gilbert like having Hughes on the squad?

Matt Hughes is a great leader for our program. He will never be the most vocal leader, but Matt will make sure the team knows what to do. He challenges himself to be the best version of himself by being one of the first to show to practice and last to leave. He isn't afraid to speak his mind if he sees something in the opponents' offense or defense which makes my coaching staff and myself trust him. He is constantly looking for ways to win and will do whatever it takes to get there.

Former teammates ready to play ball

Group of six friends from former travel team all have committed to play at DI schools

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Seven years ago Pat Hughes worked with Top Tier to put together a travel baseball team to give his son and other young athletes in the area a chance to play with their friends and be coached by their dads in a high-level program.

He said he knew even then that some of the boys had the potential to play baseball at the Division I level.

Six of his players already have committed, including two sophomores. They are Hinsdale Central senior Luke Adams, Central junior Ben Oosterbaan, Nazareth Academy junior Lucas Smith and Naz sophomores John Hughes and Cooper Malamazian. The sixth is junior Tristan Head, who moved to Florida last year. He will play at University of Virginia.

"For the ones that are currently committed, I knew that they would all be Division 1 players," Hughes said. "I could see them in the context of this larger travel world and how they fit in. There's at least two (more) that have an opportunity to commit and play higher level college baseball, maybe three."

Jim Donovan, a professional coach and trainer who worked with the team, said the boys' level of commitment and willingness to listen differentiated them from other players their age.

"There are lots of kids who at early ages will show flashes of greatness, so to speak, and many times those do not sustain, because usually when you're really good when you're very young, sometimes there is a lack of receptivity to coaching and development," Donovan said. "All of those guys, they just never showed any signs of that."

"They were always extremely coachable and dedicated to their craft," he continued. "They bought into that mindset that this takes time and it's not something that's an overnight process. You're constantly needing to work on the game and your presence in it."

Coach Jim Smith, Lucas' dad, said the players had a drive that was uncommon for kids their age.

"All of them took the responsibility very seriously," he said. "I know every single one of those kids, they put time, effort and work into it."

He witnessed that firsthand with his son.

"He just wanted to become a better ballplayer and he put the time in," he said. "He's gone out and gotten it himself. No one
