Commission advises against moratorium

After listening to significant public comment, advisory body votes against 'pause'

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

The Hinsdale Plan Commission does not support a 180-day moratorium on the teardown of historic homes in the village.

The 4-2 vote came at the close of a public hearing during which commissioners listened to more than eight hours of comments stretched across three sessions. Because the hearing was held via Zoom due to the COVID-19 pandemic, residents were allowed to call in or submit written comments expressing their opinion.

"The village board of trustees wanted community input, and I really think we got it," commission Chairman Steve Cashman said after the public comment portion of the hearing was closed.

The temporary teardown ban had been proposed to give village officials time to develop new zoning regulations promoting historic preservation.

But the commissioners who opposed the moratorium — Cashman, Gerald Jablonski, Jim Krillenberger and Troy Unell — echoed the remarks of many speakers asserting the measure would infringe on people's property rights.

"I think homeowners ought to be allowed to do what they want to with their property," Krillenberger said. "The distinction between 'significant' and 'contributing' doesn't matter. We should not pursue this moratorium."

Jablonski questioned the criteria for historic homes, saying he can't think of a single house built in Hinsdale in 1970 that should be saved.

Demolition permit requests for the historic homes at 419 and 716 S. Oak St. are cited by many for prompting the village board to propose a six-month moratorium on the teardown of historic structures. Plan commissioners Tuesday voted 4-2 against recommending a moratorium. Now the village board will take up the issue. (file photos)

Property owners who have been waiting for this process to end to obtain a demolition permit should not be held up any longer, he added.

"Let these people go on and build their homes. Their lives have been on hold for 3 1/2 months," he said.

Cashman pointed out that people initially didn't like the homes designed by Frank Lloyd Wright because they were too radical and suggested he wouldn't be able to build a house in Hinsdale.

"Good design, democracy and capitalism all together create a beautiful town like Hinsdale," he said. "And in the end, I'd rather let democracy and capitalism (prevail). If it's an ugly house, it will go away, but I don't think we should tell our neighbors what their house should look like."

Commissioners Julie Crnovich and Michelle

Fisher supported the moratorium, with Crnovich noting that one-third of the village's housing stock — more than 2,000 homes — have been torn down and replaced.

"This is not a taking of property rights," Crnovich said. "In my opinion, it's a pause."

"We've come a long way with this and I would like to see it done right and be finished," she added.

Unell countered that there is no reason work to revise the village's code cannot proceed.

"We shouldn't need to hold a moratorium over people's heads to do that," he said.

The commission is expected to verify its findings at its next meeting on Wednesday, July 8. The village board then would take up the recommendation at its Tuesday, July 14, meeting.

Cauley proposes historic preservation plan

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

A week before plan commissioners finished their deliberations on a proposed moratorium to stop the demolition of historic homes, Village President Tom Cauley presented a draft ordinance designed to help preserve such homes.

The draft is actually a revision to Title 14 of the village code, which covers historic preservation.

The new language offers several incentives to homeowners who want to renovate a historic home, including an exemption from floor-area ratio requirements (which regulate the size of a home relative to the lot) and relief from rear and side yard setback requirements.

Financial incentives could feature a rebate on the village portion of one's property taxes and the waiving of public hearing, building permit and other fees. The revised ordinance also would expedite the process for homeowners to appear before the historic preservation commission or zoning board of appeals.

Cauley presented the draft revision at the village board meeting June 16, citing the scheduling difficulties the COVID-19 pandemic has created since trustees first asked the plan commission to consider a moratorium in March.

"There has been an extended period of time since we talked about this at the board level, so I thought it would be worth proposing something to just get the ball rolling," he said. "This is nothing more than a discussion item."

He characterized the revisions as offering "more carrots than sticks" and identified the one "stick" as the board's ability to delay the sale of a historic home for up to six months to "afford an opportunity to find alternatives to the proposed action." One example given was requiring the applicant to market the property with a public real estate listing that highlights the incentives offered. All other input from trustees or the historic preservation commission would be advisory.

Cauley said he was trying to balance the desire to preserve historic homes with respect for people's property rights.

"In my mind, the tie should go to the people who want you to respect their property rights, because I think it's very easy for others to say, 'I want my neighbor to keep his house and I don't care how that financially impacts him,'" he commented.

Plan commissioners discussed the proposed changes as they considered the moratorium at their meeting Tuesday night. They supported the idea of offering incentives.

"I think the village should look to implement those as soon as possible," Commissioner Troy Unell said of the incentives.

Commission Chairman Steve Cashman believes the village board should ask voters in a referendum whether village property taxes should be rebated on historic homes.

"If you're going to do that, the entire village needs to chime in," he said.

Julie Laux, owner of J Jordan Homes who wants to tear down and replace the home at 641 S. Elm St., called in to the village board meeting to object to what she considers the misdirection of residents' attention.

"(A)ll of the villagers think they are commenting on whether we should have a moratorium, when they should be commenting on what is happening in the ultimate ordinance," she said.

Laux voiced support for incentives and believes any changes must guarantee a reasonable time frame for homeowners to apply for a renovation or demolition permit.

"Right now it is a very long and arduous process that has a limited amount of time," she said.

Any proposed changes to the ordinance would be subject to a plan commission public hearing and several discussions at the village board level before they could be enacted.

'New way of doing school' looms in fall

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale High School District 86 officials expect in-person learning to resume for the 2020-21 school year. But exactly what that will look like in the midst of a pandemic remains unclear.

At the June 25 school board meeting, Superintendent Tammy Prentiss updated board members on the work of the district's Recovery-Revitalization-Restored Committee, a group composed of teachers, department chairs, and building and district administrators charged with crafting return-to-school plans.

Among the preliminary guidelines developed for in-person instruction are the required use of face masks, either mandated temperature checks or self-certified assurances of health at entry and a prohibition against more than 50 individuals gathering in one space. The guidance closely follows that outlined in a 60-page document jointly put out by the Illinois State Board of Education and Illinois State Board of Health two days earlier. But Prentiss said that missive falls short of providing many firm parameters.

"You will see that many times (the document) uses the phrase, 'If possible ...,' 'In consideration ...,' 'Consult with local ...,' she reported. "This guidance document does not give a lot of clear direction."

For example, Prentiss cited, the 50 people-per-room restriction would render lunch in Hinsdale Central and Hinsdale South cafeterias unworkable.

"That means our students could not have lunch because we would have to start school at 3 in the morning to have that many lunch periods," she remarked, suggesting cafeterias instead be treated like restaurants and serve at 25-percent capacity.

Hinsdale Central Principal and RRR Committee member Bill Walsh, who participated in the meeting remotely due to having contracted COVID-19 himself, said while in-school learning is optimal, a hybrid model in which students would move between in-person and remote learning may also come into play.

"We should all anticipate at some point a remote learning environment will be required due to the public health crisis," Walsh said. "We recognize that the most powerful, impactful and meaningful way to promote student growth is through in-person instruction. But we also know that during a public health crisis, we must take purposeful steps to ensure a return to school in person is both safe and sanitary."

"The school day environment will not be fixed throughout the '20-21 school year," he added

Officials said costs are expected in procuring masks and having increased staff to perform more frequent cleanings of common areas. Prentiss said she is working in close collaboration with other schools across the county to align their approach.

"DuPage County superintendents are extremely interested in working together in making sure ... DuPage County stays united both in academics and co-curriculars," she said.

Board member Kathleen Hirsman thanked staff for the update and urged patience from the community as the landscape keeps shifting.

"There's a lot of people who think they have the solutions, and we just need to let them know there are no simple solutions," Hirsman said.

Board President Kevin Camden said the board has to consider what's best for all in the district's community.

"The primary guidance is health and safety of the students," Camden stressed, underscoring that face masks will be required. "We have students and staff that have auto-immune diseases and other concerns that we have to be sensitive to, so this is not going to be a one-size fits all return, either."

Prentiss said there will be a category for Transition Center students who can take part in-person activities to meet their special needs when the rest of the district may be doing remote learning. She declared that one thing is certain.

"Whatever August looks like, it's no longer school as usual. It is a new way of doing school," Prentiss said.

The RRR Committee is expected to present its recommended plan for the 2020-21 school year at the board's July 23 meeting.

Annual fall events at Hinsdale Central High School — like the Homecoming pep rally — are expected to look a lot different this year as schools plan to welcome back students with social distancing and other safety measures in place in an effort to prevent outbreaks of COVID-19. (file photo)

D181 aims for reopening plan by month's end

By Pamela Lannom

plannom@thehinsdalean.com

By the end of July, Community Consolidated Elementary District 181 officials hope to have a guidebook and web page that details procedures for reopening schools available to families.

"We will continue our conversations in the coming weeks and want to be sure we are incorporating the voices of our teachers, staff, parents and community partners," Superintendent Hector Garcia wrote in a June 26 email to district families.

The district has formed a transition team that includes a school board representative, a PTO president from each school, staff representing each school and staff category, the administrative team and community partners.

The district's plan will follow the guidelines offered in a 60-page document created by the Illinois State Board of Education in conjunction with the Illinois Department of Public Health. Several topics must be considered, Garcia wrote in his email, including scheduling, transportation, the use of masks and social distancing.

"Throughout all of these conversations, we are balancing the needs of our students academically, socially and emotionally with their physical safety and well-being," he wrote.

District officials were planning to debrief with staff today, July 2, and check in with families after the Fourth of July holiday, according to communications director Jamie Lavigueur. More information will be released as it becomes available.

Man sentenced to life for brutal murder

By Susan Sarkauskas of the Daily Herald

The man convicted of killing Andrea Urban in the kitchen of her Hinsdale home on May 4, 2017, was sentenced Tuesday to natural life in prison.

In sentencing Dominic Sanders of University Park, DuPage County Circuit Court Judge Brian Telander agreed with the jury that the murder was exceptionally brutal and heinous and indicative of wanton cruelty, the legal standard for imposing natural life.

A jury in January found Sanders guilty of first-degree murder, home invasion and residential burglary.

Telander disagreed with the contentions of Sanders' sister, mother and niece, who wrote letters saying Sanders was incapable of such violence.

"The evidence would suggest they really don't know the defendant," Telander said.

Sanders, then 30, was arrested after police discovered he had pawned a ring belonging to Urban.

Authorities said he was walking through her neighborhood the day of the murder, looking for a place to burglarize.

Sanders told police he opened the front door of her home, saw the ring on a half-wall in the entryway, and reached in and took it.

Prosecutors also played a videotape of Sanders and a second jail detainee attacking another detainee in December 2019 that left the man with three broken ribs, a punctured lung and a subdural hematoma on his brain. Telander cited that as evidence of Sanders' nature.

Telander also said he agreed with prosecutors that Sanders had tried, in May 2017, to get his mother and cousin to destroy evidence of the slaying.

Prosecutors played a recorded phone call from the jail, in which Sanders mentioned "things" in a gray bin and on a chair that he had left at his cousin's, and suggested the cousin could burn them on the barbecue grill, since the family was having a cookout for the Memorial Day holiday. Prosecutors believe those items may have been clothing Sanders wore the day of the murder.

Urban's son, daughter and mother read statements to the court.

Her son, then a senior in high school, was the one who found the body.

"She did not just die. She did not have an accident. She was murdered," he said, the volume of his voice increasing with each sentence. He said Sanders treated his mother like an animal who had gotten in his way.

"She was not some animal or rodent or stupid little bug. She was my mom," he said.

His sister, who was 11 at the time, said she struggles whenever friends talk about their own mothers.

"The defendant took away our world cruelly. Now the only time I can see her is in my dreams," the girl said.

Sanders, who did not testify at his trial, spoke Thursday. He said he felt sorry for Urban's family, but maintained he did not commit the crime.

"I'm not capable of doing anything like this," he said.

He acknowledged opening Urban's front door and said that maybe if he had opened it fully, he would have seen the attack and been able to help her. Turning toward Urban's relatives, he said "If they need somebody to hate, I'll be that person. (But) I can't take responsibility for the crime because I didn't do it."

Former D86 board leader resigns due to move

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Nancy Pollak, who served as president of the Hinsdale High School District 86 Board from May 2019 to May 2020, resigned from the board effective July 1.

She and her family are permanently relocating to a home they own in Michigan.

Pollak had expected to finish her term in 2021 before moving, but the circumstances surrounding COVID-19 altered her plans, she told The Hinsdalean.

"We've already spent 100 days (in Michigan) this year. It just seemed to make sense," she said.

Asked if her decision was prompted by happenings in the district, including the May 28 settlement of a First Amendment lawsuit filed against her and the board, Pollak said that was not a factor.

"Absolutely not," she said. "I have never been afraid to face a challenge and make tough decisions. You're not going to please everyone."

In her resignation letter, which she sent to board President Kevin Camden June 29, Pollak expressed pride in the board's accomplishments since she was elected in 2017, including the creation of a strategic plan, passage of the $139 million facilities referendum and elimination of the buffer zone. In 2019, the board began implementing the strategic plan, stressing curriculum equity between the two district high schools, improving relationships with teachers and staff and putting the referendum dollars to work.

"I am disappointed to leave with so much work left to be done," she wrote.

She cited racial tensions, state finances, the COVID-19 pandemic and declining enrollment at Hinsdale South as serious issues the district faces.

"I have complete confidence in your leadership and the stewardship of our building principals, Bill Walsh and Arwen Pokorny-Lyp, to ensure that District 86 will face these challenges head on and implement solutions that will ensure the continuation of excellence in District 86," she wrote.

Camden stated in an email to the District 86 community Tuesday that he is happy for his friend but saddened by the loss of a trusted leader on the board.

"Nancy has been a dedicated and selfless public servant, particularly in the area of public education," Camden commented. "On behalf of the board I want to thank Nancy for everything she has done for our district and wish her and Dale all the best as they embark on this exciting next chapter in their lives. I also want to thank Nancy's children for always supporting her in her service."

The board is working on an application for prospective candidates, Camden noted, and invited anyone with questions to send an email to boe@hinsdale86.org.

For McGonagle, TCH job ‘part of who I’ve always been’

Several years ago a recent immigrant from China who had settled in the Hinsdale area with her family stopped into The Community House, looking for a way to connect with her new neighbors.

She met Marcie McGonagle, director of volunteer services, who worked through the language barrier to find a good fit.

“I was trying to get a sense of what she would be interested in,” McGonagle recounted. “I could sense that she was lonely.”

She asked the woman if she had made any friends. The woman smiled.

“She pointed at me and said, ‘You, my friend.’ It was just the sweetest thing,” McGonagle said. “That’s what I love about The Community House. People think of us as their friends.”

McGonagle spent the last few weeks saying goodbye to many of those friends, retiring this week after more than two decades with the organization. That was a lot longer than she expected after having last worked as a speech pathologist in a public school.

“I just never really imagined working for a nonprofit,” she remarked.

But the match was magical.

“I’ve always been passionate about volunteering, so it was a wonderful opportunity to get paid for helping people,” she said. “For me it’s just the perfect fit to actually be employed in the nonprofit world.”

McGonagle earned both her undergrad and master’s degrees at Indiana University, where she also met her future husband, Timothy. She considers her Community House tenure, which began in 1999, her “third career” after working in schools and then staying home to raise their two daughters.

During those 21 years, she launched the summer Volunteer Camp for middle school students and the Appreciation Reception to recognize outstanding volunteers, both ongoing annual events. And another initiative that truly stands out.

“Certainly the highlight for me is creating the Junior Board,” McGonagle said of the team of teens that help power The Community House’s engine of volunteerism.

“Working with these high school students and watching them flourishing and develop a passion for service themselves, as well as leadership skills, has been very gratifying,” she said

Board alums put together a 12-minute video as a retirement tribute, thanking McGonagle for her life-shaping impact.

“It’s really so special for me to know that I’ve been a positive influence in their lives, because that’s what I set out to do,” McGonagle said. “Now I have this permanent video that I can watch over and over.”

In retirement, she looks forward to being “Gigi” in person for her four grandchildren ages 1-4.

She referenced a verse from one of her favorite poems, “The Summer Day” by Mary Oliver.

“Tell me, what is it you plan to do with your one wild and precious life?” it poses.

“Keep the magic moving forward,” McGonagle answers. “Good times are ahead.”

EDITORIAL

Let July Fourth be a catalyst for us to unite anew

The parades won't be marching past nor fireworks bursting overhead for most of us Saturday. The Fourth of July is next in the unyielding procession of "This is not our normal (fill in the blank)" occasions.

Backyard barbecues and pool parties that are held will hopefully be socially distanced or face-mask friendly or both as we find ways to gather while balancing socializing with safety. The COVID-19 pandemic continues to alter life as we knew it. The freedoms we once had when it came to our comings and goings, our exchanging and embracing, our working and playing have been curtailed over the last several months, painfully so in many cases.

Independence is a value we Americans guard fiercely. Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness is how our revolutionary forebears enshrined it, and early July is when we come together as a people annually to extol the liberties that form the bedrock of our Republic.

It hurts that we can't celebrate in the ways that help enliven this holiday. The absence of festivities may even compel some to consider an alternative reality in which July 4 is just another summer day. We suppose it likely would be if that uprising in 1776 had been summarily extinguished by the heavily favored British Army. What if freedom had never reached the shores of those 13 colonies?

Last month our nation collectively took notice like never before of Juneteenth, a day celebrating the liberation of those who had not been included by those who purported to create a "perfect Union, establish Justice ... and secure the Blessings of Liberty." President Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation on Sept. 22, 1862. But for slaves living in the far-flung outpost of Galveston, Texas, news that their chains of forced labor had been legally unshackled didn't reach their ears until June 19, 1865.

Thirteen years earlier, escaped slave turned statesman and abolitionist Frederick Douglass pointed out the hypocrisy of America's celebration of Independence Day.

"The rich inheritance of justice, liberty, prosperity and independence, bequeathed by your fathers, is shared by you, not by me," he said. "The sunlight that brought life and healing to you has brought stripes and death to me. This Fourth (of) July is yours, not mine. You may rejoice, I must mourn."

The mourning continues today as the full blessings of liberty remain an unfulfilled promise. But we have hope that a new light of justice is shining.

Crisis can bring out the best in a people, and it can bring out the worst. As we grapple with these simultaneous seismic social events, let us be thankful we do so in a land that has shown an ability to overcome its own mistakes and failings to rise to the ideals set forth in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. Those original colonies set out on a unprecedented course, just as our now 50 states find ourselves in uncharted territory in an effort to stamp out racism and a pandemic.

We don't need parades to do that leg work. We just need each other, walking together to a brighter future.

COMMENTARY

This is a Fourth of July we'll never forget

Holidays always trigger a lot of memories, and Independence Day is no exception.

One of my favorite Fourth of July holidays is quite possibly one of yours as well. In 2013 the Hinsdale parade featured none other than Coach Q and the Stanley Cup. When the fire engine he was riding on made the turn from Garfield Avenue onto First Street, you could hear the roar of the crowd from more than a block away.

The first Hinsdale parade I ever attended is etched in my mind as well, for an entirely different reason. I was approaching my one-year anniversary as a proof-reader at The Doings, where I also handled the Kids Club page. It was the 20th anniversary of Neil Armstrong's landing on the moon. We built a giant papier-mâché moon to put on our float, and I created a handout for kids. I made a little typo, and instead of listing that historic event as taking place in 1969, our flier read 1989. Several bottles of White Out and lots of teasing later, I and several co-workers had turned thousands of 8's into 6's.

I spent one Fourth of July with my husband in Italy. While we missed the parade, barbecue and fireworks we usually enjoy, we managed to console ourselves with breathtaking views and homemade pasta and gelato.

Then there's the year we spent the Fourth in Saugatuck, where we were astonished by the number of boats in the harbor, and the one we spent in Beecher, where we were astonished by the number of tractors in the parade.

When I was a kid, my parents used to take me to watch fireworks at Eisenhower High School in Blue Island, which wasn't far from where my grandma lived. The Fourth of July celebration there was a major production, with marching bands and — if memory serves — people parachuting onto the football field.

Probably my most memorable Fourth of July was the one we spent in Hinsdale, Montana, in 2016. We wrote about all the Hinsdales in the U.S. in conjunction with the paper's 10th anniversary.

I chose the farthest and least-populated so we could tuck on a visit to South Dakota, where Mount Rushmore, the Badlands and my husband's Uncle Glenn reside.

Montana's Hinsdale has only 216 residents, so it seemed wise to visit during its Milk River Days celebration July 3-4.

We enjoyed the rodeo (my first ever!), the parade (that traveled up one side of the street, then turned around and headed back down the other) and the fireworks (which almost had to be canceled due to drought). My favorite part of the trip, though, was talking to the folks who lived there, including one man who spent $800 on two pies auctioned off for the emergency department fundraiser.

Hinsdale, Montana, and our Hinsdale don't have a whole lot in common, but we will on July 4. Neither town will celebrate our country's birthday the way we usually do because of COVID-19.

I know there will be moments Saturday when I miss the hallmarks of this holiday and start to feel a little sorry for myself. But I know that in 365 short days, the Fourth of July will roll around again. By that time, we hope and pray, a vaccine will have made COVID-19 a thing of the past. And we can celebrate once more.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Minus parade, hope marches on

I think the refugees currently living with my husband and me would have enjoyed Hinsdale's Fourth of July parade.

By "refugees" I mean my daughter, Amanda, son-in-law Drew and my 5-year-old granddaughter, Avery. The trio made a hasty exit out of

Denise Joyce

New York City at the end of March, just as the COVID-19 crisis made life there too uncertain for them. After an anxious 12-hour drive across Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and on into Illinois, the trio arrived on our doorstep in the middle of the night.

We had agreed in advance that there would be no welcoming hugs or any conversations conducted less than 6 feet apart. For the next two weeks, we physically distanced and regularly disinfected.

Eventually, with happy sighs of relief and no signs of the virus, we merged our households and held the first of many family dinners at the same table.

Avery took all the upheaval in stride, adjusting to life where outside awaits just beyond the front door, as opposed to trekking from their apartment to the hallway that leads to the elevator that accesses the lobby that connects to the foyer that opens — whew — to the sidewalk.

Her presence here carries echoes of the days when her mother was a 5-year-old heading out the front door to help me plant flowers while spinning "let's pretend" scenarios.

Both Amanda and her younger brother, Jonathan, made appearances in Hinsdale's Fourth of July parade, Jonathan in his Little League uniform, Amanda in a princess dress. Other memories include the time I was puzzled by a costumed ... something ... accompanying Hinsdale Hospital's float. Sensing my failure to comprehend, my husband leaned in and helpfully explained, "Denise, I believe that's a polyp."

This year's parade, canceled due to concerns about the pandemic, will be missed by those of us who enjoy the lively celebration of patriotism and the chance to socialize with friends and neighbors. I'll even miss the politicians.

I recently found myself imagining how sweet it would be to see Avery tracing her mother and uncle's footsteps along the parade route: north on Garfield, west on Hinsdale Avenue and then south on Grant before finally disbanding — hot and sweaty — near Robbins Park.

Perhaps Avery would wear her "Frozen" Anna coronation dress. But surely it would be too hot for the matching elbow-length green gloves.

Yes, that's some crazy daydreaming. But picturing your granddaughter doing something as normal as taking part in one of the village's time-honored traditions doesn't feel crazy. It feels more like hope.

Who knows? Maybe Avery and that coronation dress — with gloves! — will make an appearance at the 55th annual Hinsdale Christmas Walk.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Board should reject moratorium as commission did

On Tuesday night, the Hinsdale Plan Commission wisely voted 4-2 against imposing any type of moratorium on home demolitions. Even the two members in favor expressed doubts that the proposed six-month duration was actually necessary.

Unfortunately, the plan commission is merely an advisory body and the village trustees, who have heard no public testimony, are free to disregard the commission's vote.

The top-down, hastily-conceived moratorium proposed by the board was sparked when current owners of three old homes in Southeast Hinsdale filed plans to demolish and build new homes on their lots. The village's knee-jerk reaction is an imprudent way to formulate public policy — particularly a draconian interference with homeowner property rights.

The moratorium proposed by the board is a spectacularly bad idea for several reasons.

First, it is an unprecedented erosion of private property rights, empowering a government body to second-guess and override homeowners' decisions to optimize their property.

Second, the board's overly-inclusive teardown ban affects 26 percent of all Hinsdale homes, relying on an obsolete, 21 year-old architectural survey lacking the original supporting database, notes and photographs. (Think your home isn't affected? You might be surprised!)

Finally, the board has had the past 25 years (since the mid-1990s) to consider meaningful preservation measures. The proposed six month "pause" has been under discussion for 3.5 months. The urgency of this structurally flawed moratorium is contrived.

Preservation should be encouraged with incentives supported by the entire community, not by treading on the property rights of a relatively few individual owners. — Dale Kleber, Hinsdale

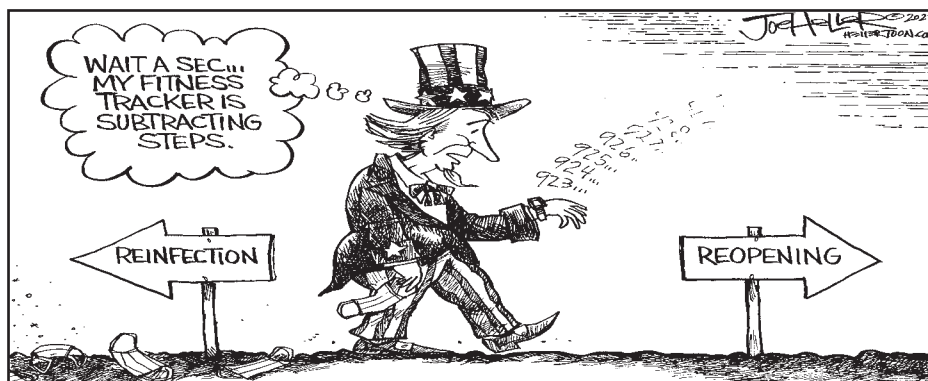

Cook grateful as he passes baton to new HCS leader

Dear neighbors — This week, I retire as executive director of HCS Family Services. It wouldn't, however, be right to leave without sharing my deep thanks with our good-hearted community. Even in these days of social distancing, you've come together to make an impact right here in our own backyard. You've found many important ways to support local hunger relief. You've volunteered, made financial donations and organized food drives for our two food pantries. Please know that we couldn't have responded to the surging demand at our food pantries without your generous support.

During my time at HCS Family Services, my eyes have been opened to the acute, yet often hidden, needs in our own community. At the very same time, I've been inspired to see so many partners step forward to help our hungry neighbors. I'm proud to live in such a compassionate, caring place.

Leading a chapter of HCS Family Service's proud 80+ year history has been an honor for me. I now wish our new executive director, Amy Wickstrom, all the best as she writes the next chapter alongside our special staff, volunteers and community partners. I will always carry with me a great love of this organization and passion for their cause. I will never forget all the generous friends and partners that I've met along the way. — Stan Cook, departing executive director, HCS Family Services

Joyce C. Hahn

Joyce C. Hahn, nee Cordts, 88, a 15-year resident of Clarendon Hills, formerly of Hinsdale and Burr Ridge, passed away peacefully June 17, 2020.

She was born in 1932, in Pekin to Glenn F. and Blanche A. Cordts.

She graduated, as a National Honor Society Member from Pekin Community High School in 1950 and from the School of Nursing at The Methodist Hospital of Central Illinois in 1953. Her first nursing job was at Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago.

Joyce married Jerome J. Hahn, MD, on June 15, 1957. Their union lasted 47 years until "Doc" passed away in November 2004. Her work as a registered nurse was interrupted by the more rewarding career of motherhood. Balancing this passion and responsibility with other interests, she was enthusiastic about bowling, playing golf and tennis. She also enjoyed bridge group. She followed the Blackhawks, Bulls and Cubs. She tolerated the Bears. At neighborhood block parties, Mrs. Hahn's delicious potato salad never failed to impress.

Joyce was always active at the Hinsdale United Methodist Church. Once her athletic diversions began to slow, she went full throttle as a volunteer at church and in the community. There were frequent outings with "the old farts" to plays, musicals and the like, and post-church lunches with her friends were always on the calendar.

Even with such a full schedule — work, motherhood, casual sports and church membership, Joyce found time to travel. She cruised the Rhine and the Caribbean. She visited the Canadian Rockies, San Diego, New Orleans and Hawaii. She also enjoyed visiting local places, such as Traverse City, Mich., and Galena. Joyce was also a voracious reader. She was never without a newspaper, a magazine or a book. She was an accomplished baker, and her perennial pumpkin bread earned rave reviews and legions of fans. Joyce's unique sense of humor was as appreciated.

The long list of causes and organizations she donated money to and the cards and gifts she would send to her wide circle of friends are just two examples of her generous and giving nature. She enjoyed shopping, watching "Wheel of Fortune," and planting and tending to her Martha Washington Geraniums. She loved being a grandmother and adored being a great-grandmother.

She is survived by her three sons, Mark J. Hahn, Glenn E. Hahn and Chris J. Hahn; her six grandchildren, Cody (Jordan) Larimore, Haley (Jonathan) Woods, Sarah (Danny) Matz, Michael (Sara) Hahn, Christopher Hahn, and Olivia Hahn; her one great-grandchild, Tyson Larimore; her two younger brothers, Kenley Cordts and Robert G. "Bob" (Carolyn) Cordts; and her three nephews, Bryan (Shelly) Cordts, Bradley (Kim) Cordts, and Brandon (Dawn) Cordts.

In lieu of flowers, charitable contributions can be made to the Joyce Hahn ("Troublemaker") Memorial Fund, care of Hinsdale United Methodist Women.

Visitation is from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, July 10, at Adolf Funeral Home, 7000 S. Madison St., Willowbrook.

A memorial service will be held at Hinsdale United Methodist Church at a date and time to be determined. Joyce will be buried next to her parents in Lakeside Cemetery in Pekin.

In addition, an unlocked 2005 Infiniti FX35 with the key fob inside was taken while it was parked near Fuller's Service Center, 102 W. Chicago Ave., at 2 a.m. June 27. The vehicle was located by Wheaton police later June 27 and recovered by Hinsdale police.

The offenders are targeting unlocked cars, garages with a garage remote in an unlocked vehicle parked outside and auto thefts, police stated. This activity occurs in the overnight hours, and offenders are drawn to the area hoping to locate a high-end vehicle unlocked with the key fobs inside.

Over this last weekend, Hinsdale officers on patrol located and chased a total of four stolen automobiles from the area of County Line and Sixth Street and the area of Elm & Minneola streets. These enforcement actions kept the community from experiencing additional burglaries and auto thefts, the police department stated.

Police are asking residents to do their part by locking their property and securing their fobs each and every night and, as always, immediately contacting the Hinsdale Police Department if they observe suspicious activity.

ASK AN EXPERT

KHUSHBOO JOSHI, PHYSICAL THERAPIST

Why is pelvic floor health important?

In the early months of 2020, physical therapist Khushboo Joshi was busy tweaking a telehealth version of her new private practice as a means of providing pelvic health services to women living in places that lacked easy access to care.

In March 2020, that place became Joshi's own home.

A physical therapist for 18 years, Joshi opened her own private practice upon moving to Hinsdale earlier this year. Along with a telehealth site that would allow her to treat women worldwide, she planned to offer in-home visits to patients within a certain radius of her Hinsdale home.

"When shelter in place started, we quickly shifted our focus," said Joshi, who after months of seeing patients exclusively online is now making a slow return to in-home treatment of women's pelvic floor problems.

Joshi specializes in therapies that treat a long list of common conditions, all of which can be controlled and even eliminated by strengthening the pelvic floor.

Poor pelvic floor strength is often the root cause of conditions such as bladder leakage, incontinence, painful sex and back pain, Joshi said.

She said the conditions are so common, many women regard them as normal. But she said no woman should have to live with pain or incontinence.

"It's shockingly common and shockingly fixable," Joshi said.

While most women are familiar with their body's core, many think of the core as a cylinder that includes the abdominal and back muscles. In reality, Joshi said, the core is a "pressure regulating system" that includes the diaphragm at the top and the pelvic muscles at the bottom. If one part of the system isn't working, the whole thing is thrown out of whack, Joshi said.

Joshi's patients range from young female athletes experiencing leakage to grandmothers who have spent decades believing that bladder leakage and pain were just normal parts of aging.

"Childbirth is the biggest insult to the pelvic floor," Joshi said. In other countries, such as France, women automatically are prescribed physical therapy after childbirth. As a result, they avoid many of the common problems experienced by women in the United States.

"It really is an American issue," Joshi said.

Before beginning treatment, patients complete an evaluation that helps Joshi assess the issues at hand. Next, when possible, she conducts an internal examination of the pelvic muscles and observes the patient's movements and posture.

Working with the patient, Joshi establishes goals and designs a treatment regimen that often includes exercises and behavioral changes. While success is highly dependent on the patient's adherence to the prescribed treatment, Joshi said most require only four to eight sessions to reach their desired result.

Joshi's services are private pay, but some insurance companies will reimburse patients for her services. And while she doesn't require a doctor's order, she works in tandem with each patient's physician. More information, including prices for services, can be found at <https://womensclinicusa.com>. — by Sandy Illian Bosch

GOOD NEWS

FIREFIGHTERS EARN HARTMANN AWARD

Six members of the Hinsdale Fire Department recently received the Hartmann Award from the Good Samaritan Hospital EMS System for their efforts to save a man on Aug. 6, 2019.

They are Chief/paramedic John Gianelli, Capt./paramedic Michael Neville, Lt./paramedic Andrew Ziemer and firefighter/paramedics Douglas Niemeyer, Patrick Schaberg and Michael Wilson.

The fire department was dispatched for a man trapped in a storm drain on a berm about 30 feet off the road who was not breathing. The patient was about 15 to 20 feet down, lying in water and trash at the bottom of the entrance shaft and likely in a toxic atmosphere.

Giannelli request a division Technical Rescue Team Response. Wilson donned his SCBA, helmet and four gas meter to enter the sewer. When he reached the bottom, the meter showed 8 percent oxygen and .8 ppm hydrogen sulfide. The patient was completely unresponsive and apneic.

Schaberg also donned his equipment and climbed down to assist Wilson in applying a harness so the crew could pull the patient out. The patient was out of the hole and receiving CPR within 15 minutes of when the incident began.

Neville and Ziemer continued care in the ambulance while Schaberg and Wilson took off their equipment and then joined the effort. Over the next 10 minutes, they applied the Lucas device for mechanical CPR, applied the cardiac monitor pads and leads, started an IV, administered three rounds of Epinephrine and successfully intubated the patient on the second attempt.

En route to Amita Hinsdale Hospital, the patient had a weak pulse and showed tachycardia on the monitor. As care was transferred to the emergency department, the patient deteriorated into V-Fib. The crew continued to assist in resuscitation efforts until positions were filled by doctors and nurses.

The patient ultimately did not survive.

"These individuals performed exceptionally well as individuals and as a team to provide the best possible outcome for their patient and to prevent further fatalities from this incident," Jon Carlson, Hinsdale's EMS coordinator, wrote in the submission letter. "The whole shift worked quickly and skillfully to complete the rescue, resuscitate and transfer care to the Hinsdale ED in 25 minutes with an on-scene time of 21 minutes."

AMITA DOCS NAMED AMONG BEST

Sixty-nine physicians at Amita Adventist Medical Centers in Hinsdale and La Grange have been recognized as top disease doctors in the Chicago area, according to a study conducted by Castle Connolly Medical Ltd., a healthcare research and information company. The full list was published in the June/July 2020 edition of Chicago magazine.

Castle Connolly invites licensed physicians across the U.S. to nominate peers as Top Doctors in any medical specialty and in any part of the nation. Physicians cannot nominate themselves and cannot pay to be named a Top Doctor. Each year, Castle Connolly receives nearly 100,000 nominations.

"During this particularly difficult time in health care, we're very pleased to see this many of our dedicated Amita Health physicians honored in this way," said Dr. Stuart Marcus, Amita's executive vice president and chief clinical officer. "To be included on this list requires nomination by their peers for excellence, safety and commitment to their chosen profession. These are just a few of the thousands of physicians at AMITA Health that we're proud to have on our medical staff serving our community every day."

Library, pool among Hinsdale attractions expanding access in pandemic recovery

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Phase 4 of Restore Illinois is here, which means cherished local facilities are able to welcome back the public — at least on a limited basis.

The Hinsdale Public Library, 20 E. Maple St., will begin to reopen Tuesday, July 7, for “Grab and Go” browsing and checkout from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

“It feels great,” said Karen Keefe, executive director of the library, about the opening. The library has been closed to the public since March 16 in response to COVID-19.

Patrons and staff are required to wear masks while using the library and visits should be kept under one hour in length. Public computers are available to library cardholders by reservation only. Keefe said the library will limit the number in the building, if necessary, but the process for that is still being developed.

“This is out first pandemic,” she quipped. “Depending on what the schools do in the fall, that’s going to change our traffic flow.”

Keefe said curbside service, which the library has offered since early May, will continue “for folks that aren’t ready to come in yet.” Curbside service hours will change, however, to 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Saturday beginning July 7.

“This gives us time before and after we open to the public to still have staff in the building for extra cleanings and for pulling books and re-shelving so we’re not crossing paths too much,” she said.

Public seating, study rooms, meeting rooms, children’s toys and in-person programs are not yet available, but the library has continued to offer virtual services, including online reference, digital programs, and access to thousands of eBooks, eAudiobooks, movies, music. Use of those resources “went through the roof” during the last three months, Keefe reported.

The library also launched a special newsletter for senior patrons to maintain a spirit of community during the shutdown.

The Hinsdale Community Pool opened to the public on Monday and the Hinsdale Public Library will welcome patrons back in its building on Tuesday as the two popular sites slowly restore services amidst the village’s early recovery from the pandemic. (file photos)

“People really appreciate us reaching out and sharing really relevant information and reading recommendations,” Keefe said. “The different ways that people rely on the library to stay connected really came across through this.”

Keefe said the library continues to quarantine all returned materials for three days before putting them back on the shelves.

“We appreciate their patience,” she said. “We’re trying to operate as safely and efficiently as possible.”

Wading back in gradually

The Hinsdale Community Pool opened for public use on Monday on a reservation basis. Open swim is available from 1 to 4 p.m. daily, with baby pool hours from 9 a.m. to noon and lap swim available from 5:15 to 7:15 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m.

Operating under the current circumstances is challenging, but staff and patrons are doing their part, Heather Bereckis, the village’s supervisor of recreation, said Tuesday.

“We’re seeing people that are really excited to be there, and they are willing to help us manage the situation,” she said.

Reservations were full through today, Bereckis reported. Priority is given to residents, she noted, with a certain amount set aside for non-residents. And the demand is far-reaching.

“We are getting inquiries from Chicago, Oak Park and Aurora and Downers Grove,” she said.

Visitors must make their payment when making their reservation. They are also required to fill out a waiver, which is available online for people to complete in advance of their visit.

“We keep it on file so you only have to fill out one for the season,” Bereckis noted.

Temperature checks are taken of everyone entering the pool facility, and only those who are below 99.9 degrees will be allowed entry. Masks are required at check-in, in the locker rooms and when walking on deck, but not in the pool.

“Everyone seems really willing to cooperate” with a couple exceptions, Bereckis reported.

The chairs have been removed from the deck and areas have been marked off for each household to promote social distancing. Groups are allowed to bring in a maximum of two chairs for their space. Goggles, fins and life jackets are also permitted.

Bereckis said concessions are not being sold yet but anticipates they will be available next week.

Reservations can be made by phone only at (630) 789-7091 or (630) 789-7098 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and (630) 789-7098 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Like Keefe, Bereckis asked for patron patience.

“We have all four of our phones being answered, and we’re getting back to everyone that leaves a message,” she said.

Pet pic of the week

This is Margot, an 8-year-old organ Tabby. She was supposed to be a boy and came to us as Morris (remember the famous Morris the cat TV star?). Upon examination, we learned she is a girl. She is sweet, loves head scratches and looks like a little, round pumpkin. Margot is good with all children. SPORTS

Captains had plans for final seasons

Red Devils enjoyed their high school sports careers, sad to miss playing as a senior

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Today we present the final installment of athlete profiles that did not run during the spring season, which was canceled due to COVID-19.

Name: Chloe Lapointe
Year: senior
Hometown: Burr Ridge

What was it like not having a senior water polo season?

I actually tore my labrum before the Red-White meet. That was my first and last game. It was going to be my last game anyway because of my shoulder, but not being able to play because of coronavirus and my shoulder (was disappointing). Senior season is supposed to be the best season.

How have you improved since your freshman year?

Oh my gosh, probably so much. Freshman year I could barely hold a ball. Senior year I was teaching freshmen how to grip the ball. My treading, I couldn't put my hands up for very long freshman year. I can now tread for however long with my hands up — two hours, literally.

How would your teammates describe you?

They would describe me hopefully as a leader. I've always taken initiative, but I also know when it's a good time to have fun and let loose.

What do you do to relax?

I love sleeping or just watching TV or hanging out with my family. We love to play cards in my family.

Do you have a summer gig?

I nanny every Monday through Friday in the summer. Two boys — they're in seventh and fifth grade. Super easy, super chill.

What's next?

I'm going to the University of Denver, studying business. I just love the scenery but it's sunny 300 days of the year. I love being able to go away for a weekend, go to Vail or something, take a bus and go skiing. I'm going to play club water polo.

Why did coach Chris Ortiz like having Lapointe on the team?

This was her second year of captaincy. I couldn't imagine having a stronger leader in the goal to spur her team on to be the best that they can be. As a person in the goal, she saw everything unfolding as the game played. She would help direct people on defense when the other team was on our side of the pool and she made everybody better. Her voice was one that commanded respect and that I certainly will not forget anytime soon. She was just a joy to have on the team.

Name: Herbert Wang
Year: senior
Hometown: Hinsdale

What was it like not having a senior gymnastics season?

It was really disappointing because senior season I was planning to improve a lot because I have more time without working on college (applications) to improve my strength, improve my skill. I also was looking forward to lead the team.

When did you start competing in gymnastics?

I actually started freshman year. I had some fundamental skills, but I was very new to the sport. I didn't know anything or anyone. It was one of the first communities I formed in high school that I felt attached to.

Is there a moment that stands out?

Junior year when I started to do parallel bars more rigorously, there was one trick that I was not able to get at all and then the old head coach, Coach Wanner, he basically worked with me for a couple of days and he helped me surpass the mental barrier of doing a back flip off the parallel bars.

What do you do to relax?

I enjoy cooking a lot. It's like a creative side of me. I enjoy going to other people's houses and seeing what they have in their fridge or pantry and making a meal out of it. I do the same at home. I like creating something new out of what we have.

Do you have any special talents?

I can solve a Rubik's Cube in under 30 seconds.

Do you have a summer gig?

I was going to continue my lab work at University of Chicago. Because of corona, they closed down the lab. This summer I'm also working on data analysis for an online trader and I'm finishing my Eagle Scout.

What's next?

I'm going to attend Duke University. I'm probably going to major in math and have a double major in some science. I'm not sure what science yet. I probably will be doing some club gymnastics if I have time.

Why did coach C.J. Johnson like having Wang on the team?

Herbert Wang is a great young man. He has his own US patent, and is very smart.
