Residents key to stopping crime in town

By Pamela Lannom
plannom@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale Police Chief Brian King had a straightforward message for residents during a virtual crime forum Monday night.

Police are working diligently to prevent thieves from stealing cars and finding and arresting those who do. But the best method of crime prevention is for residents to stop leaving their cars unlocked with the key fobs inside.

"I cannot stress enough — we need to get residents to lock their cars overnight and remove their key fobs," King said.

In just the past four weeks, two cars have been stolen from the village, King said. Police have detected offenders in town and chased them off on five different occasions in the past five weeks.

At 4 a.m. Monday, a patrol officer noticed a vehicle at Eighth and Oak streets with its headlights off moving slowly through the area and discovered it had been stolen from another community and used in other crimes. The officer pursued the vehicle before ultimately ending the chase due to high speeds.

After police arrested seven individuals in March following an increase in car thefts and burglaries, the village experienced a lull in overnight activity.

"That lull is clearly over," King said.

He expects police will arrest individuals for these recent crimes, but that will not stop the thefts, King said.

"As long as we continue as a community to leave fobs in vehicles, there will continue to be arrests in the future," he said.

These types of crimes have been on the increase since 2016, King said, with more than 50 cars stolen since that time (see sidebar). The situation is not unique to the village, King said.

"Hinsdale's experience is consistent with other suburban communities. There's probably about 100 different municipalities that are hit on these overnight patterns. They go all the way from the North Shore suburbs near Chicago, out west to the Barringtons, out to McHenry County, down through the southwest suburbs," he said.

Some of the individuals that have been arrested have extensive criminal histories, he said, and surveillance videos have shown some are armed.

"This is not just a property crime issue any more," he warned. "This is a recipe for disaster waiting to happen."

He reminded residents that while Hinsdale is a relatively safe community, that doesn't mean cars should be left unlocked.

"Hinsdale is a low-crime community," he said. "It is not a no crime community."

King spent a few minutes reviewing the details of an Aug. 7 incident in which a Hinsdale man was carjacked in the parking lot of Standard Market in Westmont at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

A week later, someone rang the bell at the victim's home, looked through the windows and left, King said.

"We are attempting to identify the vehicle to track it to see if this suspicious incident is in fact related in any part of the carjacking incident that occurred in Westmont," King said.

In response to one of the questions submitted by a resident, King said he believes the police department is adequately staffed.

"If I thought Hinsdale needed more police officers I would ask for it," he said.

Another resident asked why the thieves keep targeting Hinsdale.

"It really has to do with the proliferation of these unlocked fobs in these luxury vehicles," he said. "They go where they know they can score."

Transformer fails creating power outage and small fire

Just when power was returning to many homes in town following the Aug. 10 "derecho," a transformer failed in the 900 block of South Madison Street on Aug. 11 creating an outage for homes on several nearby streets. Firefighters were called to the scene as an arcing power line created a small fire. Hinsdale firefighter/paramedic Mike Lorusso soaks down a fence that had caught fire. (Jim Slonoff photos)

City offers Pilsen, other neighborhoods

With travel no longer an option, Hinsdale family finds new adventures close to home

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

My mid-summer, after several months of quarantine, the Konieska family of Hinsdale was ready for a change of scenery. With travel out of the question, Stephanie Konieska turned to the internet for inspiration. She found she didn't have to go far to find new sights.

Konieska discovered a list of ideas for safe outdoor activities to educate and entertain. Inspired by the list, she and her 10-year-old son, Camden, set out one day in early July to discover the art and culture of Chicago's Pilsen neighborhood.

"It's a two-hour trip door to door," Konieska said. Yet what she and Camden explored was a part of the world far different from their own neighborhood.

"It's a cool neighborhood of the city," said Konieska, who despite being a longtime resident of the Chicago area had never been to Pilsen before their day trip.

Forbes agrees with Konieska, having named Pilsen one of the "12 Coolest Neighborhoods Around the World" in 2018. Identified alongside places like Amsterdam Noords and Barcelona's Sants area, the list calls the neighborhood on Chicago's lower west side "a nest of cutting-edge culture and art."

With the art galleries closed, Stephanie and Camden spent their visit taking in the beauty and diversity of the neighborhood's outdoor murals. Because of the heat of the day,

Jamie and Camden Konieska admire the Chicago skyline while enjoying a drive-in movie in the parking lot of Soldier Field. The family traveled to several city destinations in lieu of traveling due to COVID-19. (photos provided) many of the murals along the train line were admired from the comfort of the Konieskas' air conditioned car. They saw some well-planned, professional-looking works along with more amateur paintings covering the walls of the buildings' exteriors.

"It was all mixed together in kind of a beautiful way," Konieska said.

Having enjoyed the Wynwood Walls in Miami on a spring break trip, Konieska said she was confident her son would enjoy the murals closer to home, too. And she was right.

A baseball fan, Camden particularly liked the Cubs mural, while Konieska favored the works that featured peoples' faces.

"You could see a lot of expression," she said.

Because of the pandemic, Konieska said they didn't stop to enjoy the neighborhood's many highly-recommended restaurants. But having enjoyed their introduction to Pilsen, they plan to return post-pandemic to take in the parts they missed the first time around.

Another quarantine-friendly adventure for the Konieskas was the ChiTogether drive-in movie. Held in the Soldier Field parking lot, Konieska, husband Mark, Camden and daughter Jamie, 13, enjoyed a view of the Chicago skyline while watching "Boss Baby" on the big screen.

With three screens playing the movie simultaneously, everyone had a clear view, Konieska said.

Konieska said the experience left both children with a desire to explore more parts of the city. Their curiosity sent them to Lincoln Park in early August, where they found a hidden treasure in the form of an off-the-beaten-path doughnut shop. They enjoyed finding a skate park south of Soldier Field and driving by some of the places Konieska once lived. They plan to return for a visit to Jefferson Park, home of many summer festivals and Eastern European eateries.

Camden Konieska, 10, takes in the art and culture of Pilsen during a COVID-friendly outing with his mom, Stephanie. Pilsen was one of several city spots they enjoyed.

Konieska said these small but treasured outings to places just outside their door might not have taken place if not for the need to stay home this summer. Without sports and activities filling up their schedules, the family has had time to explore the world around them.

"That's kind of the silver lining for us," she said.

Stephanie Konieska and son Camden, 10, didn't have to venture far to find adventure on their day trip to Chicago's Pilsen neighborhood.

D86 goes remote, D181 pursues hybrid

Dynamic COVID-19 landscape has compelled both districts to make recent course adjustments

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

Hinsdale High School District 86 students expecting to have their first in-person classes today since the COVID-19 pandemic closed schools in March will instead be learning from home, the district announced last week.

Frustration levels were high at the district's board meeting Aug. 13 as Superintendent Tammy Prentiss informed the board of education that, due to more stringent return-to-school guidance issued Aug. 12 by the Illinois Department of Public Health and the Illinois State Board of Education, the district would have to postpone its hybrid plan of mixed and in-person/remote instruction in favor of all remote classes to start the school year.

Among the most problematic aspects, Prentiss said, were the redefining of "close contact" as being within 6 feet of a confirmed case of COVID-19, with or without a face covering, for at least 15 minutes throughout the course of a day and that any student or staff member with symptoms such as a sore throat, headache, runny nose or cough, be sent home, tested and remain at home until test results are received.

"It's just absurd, nonsensical, to the point of not even being a plan," remarked board member Keith Chval of the IDPH guidelines. "We're going to send kids home that have sniffles? Are you kidding me?"

Additionally, Prentiss reported, the close contact time frame begins two days prior to the onset of symptoms — making contact tracing more challenging — and an outbreak is now defined by IDPH as "two confirmed cases of COVID-19 infections of individuals occurring within 14 calendar days of each other in the same classroom." These updates, she said, depart significantly from previous guidance on which the district's Recovery-Revitalization-Restore Committee had based its recommendation of hybrid Hinsdale Middle School students fill the hallways in January of 2019, a scene that won't recur in the near future. District 181 plans to open schools Sept. 8 under a hybrid model, with half the students attending classes in the morning and the other half in the afternoon to reduce the chance of COVID-19 exposure while resuming in-person instruction. (file photo) in-person/remote model.

"At 4 o'clock last night, IDPH, in my opinion, changed the game plan and gave us a whole new set of things that we have to consider that was never part of any of our conversations before as a committee," Prentiss told board members, saying the "level of disruption and students coming and going" because of the new protocols would undermine "confidence in the continuity of rigorous instruction."

"It's very frustrating on the receiving end to be told three different things within 30 days of each other," she added.

Board member Kathleen Hirsman said she was also disappointed in the developments but opposed the suggestion that the district proceed with its hybrid plan anyway.

"I am not comfortable with that at all. We may disagree with (IDPH), but that is a very dangerous position" for the district, she said, citing liability concerns.

Board President Kevin Camden agreed while characterizing the seeming incongruity between the state's safety rules for athletics and its rules for academics as maddening.

"I have a disjointed understanding of how, at a state level, we can say some things are acceptable and some are not," Camden said. "We don't want to be in a circumstance where we're not working collaboratively, and we don't need to be venturing off the range on our own."

"At the end of the day our primary responsibility, at least as I see it, is to educate students. Sports and extracurricular activities would be secondary," he added.

On Friday the IDPH approved the modified sports plan developed by the Illinois High School Association. Under the plan, interscholastic competitions can take place even if a school is conducting fully remote learning.

Prentiss said the R3 committee will meet to discuss the updated guidance and report back to the board at its Aug. 27 meeting.

In Community Consolidated District 181, plans to provide full five-day in-person instruction were jettisoned in favor of a hybrid model in which students will attend class either in the morning or afternoon and learn remotely the other half of the day. Families can also opt for fully remote instruction.

At the Aug. 13 special board meeting, district board members approved both the hybrid model and remote learning model as part of the 2020-21 reopening plan. The first day of class was pushed to Sept. 8.

Under the hybrid plan, elementary students stay in one classroom as much as possible. Students in grades three to five will move in small groups for math classes. Middle school students will travel through their day in grade-level groups.

There will be no on-site lunch or recess, and all before- and after-school activities as well as field trips have been canceled. Parents are encouraged to drive their children to school to reduce the number needing to use buses.

Superintendent Hector Garcia told board members that the administration is continuing to develop transition guidelines for switching between learning models in the event that changing circumstances allow either for more in-person instruction or dictate that all students learn remotely. He said the absence of clear IDPH guidance on that has put educators in a difficult position.

"Our health organizations and our state organizations in education have left a gray area for schools to decide and try to play experts in the health field," Garcia related, saying the district will work with local experts to set strategies for switching models based on positivity rates. "We understand the frustration of not knowing."

Parents were asked in a survey to choose their child's learning model by Monday.

Writer enjoys connecting pieces of history

Author and historian John Horn compared his recounting of the Jerusalem Plank Road Operation of June 1964 to reconstructing a shattered piece of glass. The result of this long, intricate and painstaking process is part of Horn's latest book, "The Petersburg Regiment in the Civil War."

Published in 2019, the Hinsdale attorney's work was recognized in June with the Army Historical Foundation Distinguished Writing Award, an honor that Horn called "one of the happiest, most humbling moments of my life."

Horn's career as an attorney requires plenty of writing. And while building an argument for trial isn't the same as documenting history, the two tasks have real similarities, Horn said.

"You're building from step to step," he said.

Horn's interest in history goes back to his school days, when he won his high school's history prize. Years later, he married a girl from Virginia, an area rich with seldom told stories of Civil War history.

"A couple of my wife's ancestors belonged to the 12th Virginia Infantry," Horn said.

At the request of his wife's grandmother, he started digging into the family's genealogy and uncovered, among other things, a renewed fascination with the history of the country.

He's published articles in Civil War Times Illustrated and America's Civil War and also wrote "The Destruction of the Weldon Railroad," which was reissued in 2015 as "The Siege of Petersburg: The Battles for the Weldon Railroad, August 1864" and "The Petersburg Campaign" in 1993.

Horn said much of the literature that has been written about this chapter of American history focuses on the subjects of Robert E. Lee, Ulysses S. Grant and Gettysburg. But there are other stories to be told.

"There's more ground to be covered. There's so much that's not known," he said, including the uncovered story of a soldier from Tinley Park, then known as New Bremen, who won a medal of honor. Having learned the soldier's story, Horn worked with a group of fellow historians to purchase and install a marker for the soldier and the 39th Illinois Regiment at Poplar Grove National Cemetery in Petersburg.

"That's what historians do. They commemorate remarkable deeds," Horn said.

Horn's research continues as he works on his next book, about Grant's second offensive at Petersburg in June 1864. But amidst COVID-19, he's relying more heavily on the internet and electronic documents than ever before. In normal times, travel is part of his research.

Even his award, received in June, was announced and accepted via email. But that doesn't make it any less significant or make Horn any less proud.

While his research is keeping him close to home these days, Horn and wife Elizabeth Kelley are finding ways to satisfy their love of travel. They explored Bryce Canyon in June, hiked the Rockies in July and look forward to a fly fishing trip near Vail. And as soon as possible, Horn will be travel back to Virginia to visit relatives, walk the battlefields and dig into the corners of America's history.

Health department can't keep changing the rules

Was that a cough? A snuffle?

Did it take place in a classroom? Or a school hallway?

Then that student — and her siblings — must be sent home to quarantine until a COVID-19 test comes back negative or a doctor makes an alternative diagnosis. “Probable cases” (kids with COVID-like symptoms who are epidemiologically linked to a known case) will have to be quarantined, with siblings, for 14 days.

Any time kids experience any one of a dozen other symptoms (that also could mean a cold or flu), the same thing will happen. They will be sent home. So will their siblings.

This is according to the new guidelines issued by the Illinois Department of Public Health on Aug. 12. Yes, that's right. Aug. 12. Just days — or at the most a few weeks — before schools across the state were ready to start the 2020-21 school year.

The document threw educators in Hinsdale High School District 86 for such a loop that the school board decided Aug. 13 to scrap plans for a hybrid remote/in-person schedule and start the school year with a completely remote model. And it isn't the only district facing a last-minute change in plans.

The new response to COVID-like symptoms isn't the only new directive that makes it difficult for schools to open. The health department has a new definition of “close contact” that includes anyone who is within 6 feet of a confirmed case of COVID-19 for at least 15 minutes throughout the course of a day, even if both parties are wearing a mask, at any time up to two days before the onset of symptoms. School officials have said that makes contact tracing, especially when passing periods are taken into account, virtually impossible.

Some might support the more restrictive guidelines as the seven-day rolling positivity rate for the state has increased from 4 to 4.4 percent this month, up from a low of 2.4 percent on June 23.

Others believe the measures to be too restrictive and note that while cases might be on the rise, deaths are not. The total number of fatalities in the state has been at statistical norms since July 25.

We are not medical professionals, so we're not going to weigh in there. And as we've written on this page in recent weeks, getting angry about the decisions our volunteer school board members are making to try to keep kids safe is not productive.

But we can't help but express our frustration at the way this situation has been handled at the state level. The timing of last week's “update” on safety guidelines was ridiculous. We know the health department has had a busy year, but plans to reopen schools should have been a top priority for months — and final versions should have been released by early or mid-July at the very latest.

Instead, by waiting until last week, the health department left most districts with little choice but to approve a fully remote plan and working parents scrambling to figure out how to supervise their kids at home.

We all are struggling to balance safety and practicality entering the sixth month of this pandemic. The location of that sweet spot is going to vary from one household to the next.

Our beliefs might not line up with those in charge at the health department. And that's OK. As long as they don't keep changing their minds.

DIY podcast (sort of) helps me survive hiatus

I've been a little obsessed with Brené Brown's “Unlocking Us” podcast since I first was introduced to her in February by Tim Ferris on his eponymous podcast (notice a theme here?).

She's on hiatus for several weeks this summer, and I miss her. I've decided to cope by recreating a piece of her podcast here. She concludes every episode with a set of “rapid fire” questions for guests. I've enjoyed listening to their responses and thought it might be fun to write up mine.

1. Fill in the blank: Vulnerability is _____.

Necessary.

And really hard.

I wrote a column last September describing the conflicted emotions I felt after a young man rang our doorbell, hoping to sell me a subscription to the Wall Street Journal as a school fundraiser. He was a young Black man, and I wrote honestly about wanting to believe his request was legitimate while simultaneously knowing it was a scam.

The feedback on my column was not kind. I can't imagine what would happen if I wrote that piece today, given the current climate. But if we can't be open about how we respond to situations, even — and perhaps especially — when race is involved, I'm not sure how we'll ever move forward.

2. You're called to be brave. Your fear is real. You've got to do something but you can feel the fear in your throat. What's the very first thing you do?

Breathe.

3. Something people often get wrong about you.

That I am super-strict.

I am a rule follower, for sure, always have been. And I believe rules are important for kids, adding a sense of structure and stability in their lives.

But that doesn't mean I won't let Ainsley dye her hair blue or shave the side of her head (both happened this summer). I also let her have chocolate chips in her pancakes — and occasionally put some in my own pancakes as well.

3. Last show you binged and loved.

Binged and enjoyed: “Under the Dome.”

Binged and loved: “The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel.” Season four is expected in December!

4. Tell me a movie you will never turn off if you pass it flipping channels.

“Shawshank Redemption”

5. A concert you'll never forget. The Rolling Stones in spring 1999. We saw a Bulls game at the United Center the following night and couldn't get over two things: 1) How different the air in the stadium smelled from one night to the next and 2) how much less energy the Bulls had than the Stones.

The Stones did not play my favorite song, “You Can't Always Get What You Want.” Fitting, I suppose.

6. What is your favorite meal?

My birthday dinner at the now defunct Bistro Banlieue in Lombard: cream of brie soup (yes, you read that right!), grilled salmon with julienned vegetables and mustard sauce and white chocolate mousse for dessert.

7. What's on your nightstand?

A daily devotional book (right now it's “Journey to the Heart” by Melody Beattie.) There's also a lamp, an old-fashioned alarm clock and earplugs for snore protection.

8. A snapshot of an ordinary moment that is joyful for you.

Heading out with Dan and Ainsley to walk our dog, Lizzy, around the neighborhood and stopping every block to talk to a neighbor.

9. What's one thing your deeply grateful for right now?

Having my family together. After living for nine years with a work schedule that took Dan out of town 40 to 50 percent of the time, it's been wonderful never having to ask where he's going next week.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Comfort food key for unnamed time

I am challenging myself to write this column without (not once) mentioning that word we are all tiring of. Here goes ...

I would not consider myself a good cook. Adequate, yes. I fed my children fairly nutritious food — although an occasional Pop-Tart or chicken nugget wasn't unheard of. Now that the kids are gone, I have even less motivation in the kitchen. I am reminded of my Norwegian mother's sentiment: the only reason I have a kitchen is because it came with the house! Yet recent "events" (didn't say it) have led me to resurrect some tried and true recipes. Children reappeared, studying and working remotely. This tribe needed food. I had to step it up. And I did, reluctantly but somewhat competently. It's like riding a bicycle — which by the way I have recently started doing again! Then as quickly as they re-appeared, they all found their way back to their own lives (and kitchens). The "chief cook and bottle washer" was again retired.

Which leads me to this. While I never liked cooking and I actually broke into a sweat at the question "What's for dinner?", food is a touchstone for me and many. Hence, the recent shortage of flour and yeast (again — did not say it!). Besides Norwegian, I have Italian blood in my veins and food is the bedrock of that heritage. It is why at 88 my father still grows his own herbs and makes homemade pesto. He has Pesto Parties (well not this year because, well, you know) to teach my children the art of the perfect pesto. It is why every summer I have two unbreakable traditions: zucchini bread and eggplant parmigiana.

In July, when the local zucchini appear, I pull out the rarely used food processor and start shredding zucchini. A friend's recipe, it's the world's best zucchini bread. I make individual loaves for each grandchild so that they don't fight over it. Sometimes I relent and make it again later in the summer, but that's it. Once summer is gone so is my zucchini bread. I know I can buy zucchini anytime, but I won't. This way, my way, it's stays special. Summertime special.

By August the local eggplant are abundant and (just like the zucchini bread) the preparation begins. Now, unlike zucchini bread, I make eggplant parmigiana only once. Not for lack of ingredients but because it takes every pan in my kitchen to prepare and I will clean that mess up only once. It's my dad's recipe: peel, slice, pat dry, grill, egg wash, dry mix, grill again, shred cheese, make sauce, layer, layer, layer and bake. It is soooo good. I never make enough, but in the end it is enough because when it's gone, it's gone!

Even though I don't cook much, these are the things my children (and grandchildren) remember about summer, about our kitchen. They anchor us to our past, our childhood, our traditions. It's why we have turned to food in this time of uncertainty. It takes us home to a safe place with the people we love. Food, glorious food. (I did it. Right?).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Residents happy D181 is following 6-foot guideline

As concerned residents, we would like to express our gratitude to the District 181 Board of Education for staying diligent to the CDC's recommendations of distancing at least 6 feet. As COVID numbers continue to rise, in Illinois and in DuPage County, specifically, the D181 Board has taken the prudent path to reducing COVID cases in the schools and the community. — Susan Blumberg-Kason, Sudha Yalamanchi and Julie Zhu, Hinsdale

New D181 board member is confused about justice

As a parent of two students in D181, I received the survey to which the previous author and current board member referred (Bill Cotter's Aug. 6 letter). Given the choice of a five-day in-school option and a fully remote track, I saw no good options. Though my family selected the five-day choice, we were relieved that a hybrid solution was ultimately adopted. It's clearly safer to have a half-full classroom, and our 6-year-old is unlikely to successfully keep a mask on for an entire school day. I'm concerned that a sitting board member seems to entirely misunderstand the responsibility of an elected school board. That role is to weigh the interests of students, parents, teachers and the community as a whole. I would hope the board considered the latest science and the latest COVID-19 transmission data, as well. To the board member's call for justice and an up-or-down vote, I respond with a call for him to resign, if he's unwilling to take ownership for the decision that we elected this board to make. — Reid McCollum, Hinsdale

JANICE MILLER, LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

What does the centennial of the 19th Amendment's passage mean to you?

One April day, Ellen Annette Martin walked into her polling place in Lombard with the firm intention of voting in the local election. This act was noteworthy because the year was 1891, nearly three decades before women in America could vote. Armed with a legal brief underpinning her cause, Martin was allowed to cast a ballot. Then she went and brought back 14 of her female friends to vote, too.

"(Martin) was the first woman to vote in Illinois," said Janice Miller, a member of the League of Women Voters of the La Grange area. "She was a pretty remarkable woman."

This month Miller, a former 35-year Hinsdale resident now living in La Grange, and the League are marking the 100th anniversary of the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The amendment was ratified Aug. 18 and officially took effect Aug. 26, which is now commemorated as Women's Equality

Day. The chapter is holding a special Zoom program in observance of the occasion Aug. 27 (see Page 30 for details).

Miller reflected on the many decades of struggle that suffragists faced to finally achieve victory.

"It's important to remember the history of how many people suffered and fought to get the vote," she said. "They endured beatings. Some of them went through forced feedings when they went on a hunger strike. I'm awed by their courage."

The recent selection of Sen. Kamala Harris to be Democratic presidential candidate Joe Biden's running mate — the third woman ever tapped for the post — is another promising step, Miller suggested, as is the increasing number of congresswomen.

"Maybe it's a sign of progress that we can finally have women in positions of power whatever their political party," she said. "I think women can lend a lot to the political discussion."

Miller admitted to growing frustrated when observations about female officeholders or candidates stray into judgments of a superficial nature.

"If we can get away from discussions about what the female candidate is wearing and talk about real issues, that would be better," she said.

The LWV was founded in Chicago just months before the 19th Amendment was ratified, with a mission to help women carry out their new civic responsibility.

"The League is a nonpartisan organization that is really committed to education and making sure that we have an informed electorate," Martin related.

She pointed out that it took another 45 years for the Voting Rights Act to pass, which ensured the vote for people of color.

"There were all kinds of voter restrictions on various parts of the population, like Jim Crow laws in the South. Native American women weren't allowed to vote," she said.

Ellen Annette Martin likely would be pleasantly shocked at the gains women have made in U.S. democracy in the last 100 years. Miller said the anniversary serves as both a reminder of the journey thus far and encouragement to promote engagement.

"This is a good way to celebrate what has happened and good way to look forward to what work remains to be done," she said.

HJWC faces its own happy epidemic

Half a dozen expectant moms in club are relying on each other during this unusual time

By Sandy Illian Bosch
news@thehinsdalean.com

COVID-19 has gotten in the way of so many things this summer. But Kayla Weiss isn't letting it or anything else get in the way of her joy of becoming a mother.

"Everyone I've talked to who is pregnant right now kind of has the same view of COVID and pregnancy," said Weiss, who, along with at least five other members of the Hinsdale Junior Woman's Club, is expecting a baby later this year.

That's not to say that the pandemic hasn't played a role in these womens' road to motherhood.

Weiss and husband Brad were married in a simple civil ceremony late last year but were looking forward to a big celebration in 2020. Weiss had just enjoyed her bachelorette party and was looking forward to her wedding in April when everything changed. Not only was the wedding date pushed back, Weiss had just been told by fertility specialists that due to her medical history, she was unlikely to conceive naturally.

"I was fully ready that I would have to do some type of treatment or supplement," she said.

But two days after that news, she proved the doctors wrong.

Weiss said she is nothing short of thrilled about her pregnancy, but COVID-19 has had an impact. Due to safety measures, Brad wasn't allowed to accompany her to her appointments. That means he wasn't there to hear their son's heartbeat or to see his image during ultrasound screenings. But they've made the best of things. In late July Brad accompanied Kayla, along with her sister and mother, to a private imaging studio in Aurora. There, he got his first glimpse of his son.

The couple are looking forward to their son's arrival in December, but first, they'll enjoy a baby shower and celebrate the impending arrival of a new nephew. The wife of Brad's identical twin is due six weeks before Kayla. Both babies will enter an uncertain world, but Weiss is determined to make the best of it and enjoy every minute as she prepares for a December baby and a May wedding.

A happy misdiagnosis

When fellow Junior, attorney and busy mom Katherine Schoon started feeling sick in March, she feared she had contracted the virus. She was fatigued, nauseous and had a sore throat — all signs of COVID-19.

"Turns out it wasn't COVID," Schoon said. With all the talk of the virus, it never occurred to the soon-to-be 40-year-old that symptoms might point to a much happier condition.

"Whenever I get pregnant I get cold-like symptoms almost immediately," said Schoon, who will happily welcome her third child, a son, in December.

She said there's a little more anxiety and uncertainty in this pregnancy. And like Weiss, Schoon has had to attend her appointments without her husband, Patrick. But she's drawn support from her friends and fellow Juniors who are on the same strange but happy path to motherhood.

"I've been really grateful," she said, for that support.

Sixth time is a charm

Bridget Nagel's road to motherhood has been a long and bumpy one. And just days after the world shut down in March, she thought she and husband Aaron had hit a major roadblock.

The Nagels had completed their sixth round of in vitro fertilization just three days prior to a nationwide halt in fertility procedures due to COVID-19.

"Initially they told us it wasn't successful," said Nagel, who wondered just how long they would have to wait before they could try again to start a family. "We thought it was over."

But their future son proved everyone wrong.

"Our baby was a fighter," said Nagel, who is due at the end of November.

An IVF pregnancy requires a lot of ultrasounds. And while Aaron wasn't allowed to attend the first few, he was there for the 20-week scan. That's the appointment where they count the fingers and toes and ensure parents that they're having a healthy baby.

Like the other expectant Juniors, Nagel said pregnancy during COVID comes with challenges. That's especially true for first-time moms who can't attend the childbirth or baby care classes that are so often a part of pregnancy.

But she and the other moms-to-be can lean on one another.

"It's really just a unique group of women," Nagel said. "There's just so much support."

And soon, there also will be a built-in playgroup. Schoon said it's fun to think that all of these babies will likely be high school classmates one day. And they all will share the story of being a welcome surprise during a scary and uncertain time when joy and hope were needed most.

With masks and social distancing in place, this year's Wine and Art Walk at the Morton Arboretum will look a little different. But it's on for this weekend. See Page 29 for details. (photo provided)

What our customers say about us...

“ Don't throw it out!!! The shoes you still love, that bridesmaid dress you don't know what to do with, a throw pillow that's gone flat. The staff here does quality work for fair prices. I had them make me throw pillows, got the fabric from Calico Corners and the inserts from Joanne, and dropped the pieces off here. Beautiful new throw pillows with piping along the sides! They turned a bridesmaid dress into a cocktail dress that I could wear to Christmas parties. Fixed shoes, hemmed clothes. No nonsense and for a decent price. Nice work! ”

Cancer, eagerly follow all impulses to explore new interests. This is a great time to start a new hobby or even change careers. Be aggressive with your goals.

This week could mark the start of a fun and informative phase for you, Gemini. Look around at all the possibilities to learn new things. You can expand your knowledge tenfold.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
It's required patience, but things will start to make sense in your life this week, Sagittarius. All of the parts start to fall into place and the bigger picture is revealed.

my sophomore year! Every single girl on that team had one another's backs and were all deeply committed to the process of what it took to win the championship. Every one of us worked so hard throughout the entire year and we all gave 100 percent when we were training, not only physically, but mentally too. I will never forget the energy in the locker room after we won that night. It was incredible! We all as a team had a feeling of accomplishment, greatness and success.

I'm looking forward to: growing as a player and making friendships with all the girls on the team. Penn State is such an exceptional program with such great and inclusive girls and coaches and it is such an amazing feeling knowing I that I have the opportunity to make an impact on such an awesome program. I'm so excited to compete for a national championship with such outstanding people.

Nikki Hutten

University of Redlands, lacrosse

I'll remember: the team sleepover for newbie day. It was so much fun getting to know all of the girls better and it really created a true family between us

I'm looking forward to: being able to create a family in our team and being able to create long lasting memories with the Bulldogs.

Daniel Hofmann

Loras College, volleyball

I'll remember: my junior year going to state. It was the most fun year I had ever had. Those group of guys helped me grow as a volleyball player and for me to get better everyday.

I'm looking forward to: meeting all of the guys who are on the team. We have 11 freshmen coming in this year and I can't wait to make really good friendships with them. Hopefully we can win a championship in the next four years.

Grant Niestrom

Illinois Wesleyan University, lacrosse

I'll remember: the environment. Being a part of the team is a different type of lifestyle. Playing with friends and even people I have never met before is a great experience and I won't forget it for the rest of my life.

I'm looking forward to: playing lacrosse competitively. Playing for a national ring and just getting better at the sport all together. Lacrosse is the most enjoyable sport to me and the competition just adds onto how great it will be.

Madeline Pisani

University of Colorado, lacrosse

I'll remember: when we won state in 2018 my sophomore year. It was one on the best days of my life especially since the state game was played on Dickinson Field. The whole 2018 season was super fun and our team was very, very close, so to win state on our home field will all of my closest friends was something I will never forget. Another thing I loved about Central lacrosse was all the great friendships that were made through the team.

I'm looking forward to: being part of another really competitive program and school. Whenever I visit Boulder I get more and more excited each time to actually be a part of the team and play for the amazing coaches and have all the girls as my teammates. I'm super excited to go out there and play with all of them and continue to grow in my sport.

Olivia Rayis

Bowdoin College, soccer

I'll remember: playing with some people that I've grown up playing soccer with and the chance to be captain my senior year.

I'm looking forward to: getting to know my teammates and developing new friendships.

Mark Skokna

St. Ambrose University, football

I'll remember: running out onto Dickinson Field Friday nights under the lights.

I'm looking forward to: getting a chance to show what I can do at the next level and just meeting new people.

Taylor Wagner

Point Loma Nazarene University, cross country/track & field

I'll remember: winning the conference championship and taking third place at the IHSA state meet my senior cross country season, placing third in the 1,600-meter run at our sectional track meet as a freshman, running in the 4x800-meter relay at the state meet as a junior and the time I spent with my teammates, who are also my best friends.

I'm looking forward to: Point Loma's beautiful location and weather, being a part of the close-knit team and having the opportunity to work with the incredible coaches and staff. The team culture is something that really attracted me to PLNU, a small school where everyone is very close and supportive of each other.

Former Devils warm up to new homes

Rising collegians share reflections on their Central days, hopes for seasons ahead

By Ken Knutson

kknutson@thehinsdalean.com

More than 30 student-athletes who graduated from Hinsdale Central High School in May will pursue their sports at the next level. In this second installment of a two-part series, The Hinsdalean asked each incoming collegian what he or she will remember about competing as a Red Devil and what generates the most anticipation in joining a new program.

Sarah Cernugel
Holy Cross College,

I'll remember: the growth we made each year. Starting my freshman year, we only won two games, but we kept improving every year. This year we had a team full of tremendous talent so I was super excited to see how well we could do. We have always had great coaches at Hinsdale Central and I was able to develop into a much better soccer player in such a competitive and well-coached environment. Although we weren't able to have a season, one thing I will always remember about my years on the team was the friendships I made. The seasons were always so much fun.

I'm looking forward to: continuing to play soccer at a high level and contribute to the team in a positive way. The team had their best season in history last year, and we are looking to continue that success. I am super excited to play with such great soccer players and compete to hopefully win a championship!

Alexander Cho

reason to do the best you could in practice and during in-season meets. It all leads up to those final meets, conference, sectionals and finally state.

I'm looking forward to: Division III swimming at the University of Rochester, and I am curious what new events and spots I can develop as a college swimmer, as well as learning the balance of being a true student-athlete.

Cullen Cochlan
University of Pittsburgh, swimming

I'll remember: the sense of camaraderie. Each member of the team kicked off the season with the same goal in mind and kept it in their sights until the end.

I'm looking forward to: the opportunity to train and learn from a group of extremely accomplished swimmers, coaches and staff. I'm excited to take my swimming career to the next level and see what the future has in store for our team.

Jenna Collignon
Yale University, lacrosse

I'll remember: the team and the players. Throughout each year, we became so close as teammates as we spent so much time together. Starting at preseason we were together every week and then everyday during season. I had so much fun with them on and off the field and they are all incredible people. It's amazing how close we got both as friends and teammates and I will definitely miss them next year.

I'm looking forward to: the whole experience and everything that I will learn. I'm excited to get to know the team and my coaches. From when I visited the school and met the whole team, both the players and coaches seem extremely supportive. I'm looking forward to working with these people to become a stronger player. I am also excited for the academic side at Yale. They have incredible academic programs that will definitely challenge me but also teach me so much.

Braden Contreras
Valparaiso University, football

I'll remember: going out every day and just being with my best friends. I've known and played sports with these guys since I was in middle school. Knowing it was my last year with this family made me cherish every moment even more. Everyone says to enjoy high school sports because there is nothing else like it in the world, and they were right. It was a year I will remember for the rest of my life for many amazing reasons.

I'm looking forward to: meeting a new family and creating new memories. I'm looking forward to building new relationships with coaches and players every day. Lastly, I'm looking forward to starting over. Everyone's coming from different places and we get to try to make a name for ourselves on and off the field. No one knows who I really am and I have to grind my way to the top. I'm very excited and praying every day that we'll get to play sometime this year.

Lily Fuchs
DePauw University, golf

I'll remember: the ice cream runs that we would take after all of the tournaments. Not only was it a nice little treat after a long day of golfing, but it was also a great team bonding experience.

I'm looking forward to: the next level that college players compete at while still being very academically focused. The team bonding that occurs with college golf also seems so different and I am really excited to see what these next four years entail.

Alaina Hamood
Penn State University, lacrosse

I'll remember: winning the state championship
